Gathering of 50,000 People a Washington Park to Witness the Great Turf Event— Other Races.

By Telegraph to The Times. Chicago, June 20.—[By the Associated Press.] Death to one horse, $19,000 to another—that was the Amertion Derby of 1891. A scarlet flash on the horizon, fifty thousand people breathless, a gleam of white beneath the wire, and the richest stake race in the West was over. It was by Strath-meath, New York's favorite, that the battle was won. Haif a mile off where had been the thick of the fight, lay motionless on the track the dorpse of High Tariff. Tom Kiley, the gallant beast's rider, twice a Derby victor on that course, had this time pushed the limit of equine endurance. There was a sudden plunge up ward, a queer stagger for twenty yards and High Tariff sank down into the mud lifeless Whether in point of horses, famous jockeys, magnificence of fashionable display and marvelous outpouring of people, as well as sensational incidents and a bulky purse, probably no such race was ever witnessed this side of the Alleghenies, certainly not in Chicago. No one of the seven Derbies, that in preceding years have made Washington Park a celebrity, had more ibly, drop it.

showing equaling his past record, and, if within human possibility, to again carry off the laurels. High Tariff was visibly gaining and had passed three competitors, when he now rebelled. An instant later the fleet racer was a

Meantime the pace of the others was getting hotter and hotter. They swung into the stretch with Poet Scout in front, Strathmeath Second and Michael third. Overton now began to ride, tiring the leader desperately and for a moment it looked as if hesnight win. of interest than today's event. The weather was very good, being just cloudy enough to prevent the hot June sun from making the day uncom fortable. It had been raining here for three days but not a drop fell today. Such a multitude of ladies as put in ar tiring the leader desperately and for a moment it looked as if heamight win, but Covington slyly brought "Strath" up by the outer rail with a rush, stealing the former tactics of Kingman's rider and won by an open length, without the use of whip or spur. Poet Scout was second, half a length before Kingman third. Time 2:491.

Of the other races two were won by appearance at the track was unprecedented, and so great was the crus that hundreds of them were wedged helplessly in the enormous mob of male sports that packed the lawn solid in front of the betting ring. No aisle or stairway in the grand stand afforded Of the other races two were won by favorites, and as Strathmeath carried the bulk of the money in the Derby, the crowd went home happy.

Following are the other events: an inch of standing room. The galler ies and roof were black with people while the appraches from end to end of the stretch, including even the club house grounds, were full almost to suffocation. In the field showed line after line of all manner of vehicles loaded down with people.

quarters as the time for the big race approached was the worst ever wituessed in Washington Park, and the bediam, scarcely mitigated, spread to other portions of the grounds. The roof over the bookmakers's heads, in front of whom clamored thousands of eager gamesters, had by this time become thick with other thousands. The police, fearing the frail supports would give way causing perhaps loss of give way, causing, perhaps, loss of scores of lives, attempted to clear the platform. Many jumped promptly into the mass of people on the lawn. Sud-denly the supports creaked as the line of police forced back the crowd en masse, and the fact was clearly dem-onstrated that it was less perilous to onstrated that it was less perilous to allow the reckless mob to remain un-molested. The hubbub was at its height when the horses came out for the Derby, the favorites being warmly received.

This was the way they were recorded: Snowball, 122 (Garrison) and Passara, 129. (Taral) post betting 4 to 1; Foreranner, 125. (Alien) 10 to 1; Lodowick, 122. (Hill) 15 to 1; Michael, 125. Balgowan was scratched about one hour before the race.

At last the bugle sounded for the

At last the bugle sounded for the race and a frightful crush began in the fruitless attempts of the less fortunate to secure advantageous positions from to secure advantageous positions from which to view the race. Starter Sheridan mounted his box and lectured the boys. Then the horses were placed in line, and were ready for the start. The first trial was false, half a dozen refusing to break. The second attempt was without result. At the third trial the horses moved in a solid phalanx toward the starter. The red flag desended a might year went up from cended, a mighty roar went up from ne multitude, and then the tiptoeing housands realized that the great Lodowick was last, five lengths away. Coming down the stretch, Poet Scout had forged to the front, Strathmenth moving up to second place and Kingman the third. Passing the stand these positions were sturdily maintained. At the tupn Michael had worked to the front and set a marry pace down the back stretch. Poet Scout was still second, while Kingman and Strathmeath went back to the bunch. It was at this point that the sensation or the day took place. High Tariff had started sixth and been shoved relentlessly through heavy going, notwithstanding his 127 pounds weight. Kiley, by sheer force of will seemed determined to make a 1892.

THE REPUBLIC IN HOT WATER WITH FRANCE.

European Powers Talking of Intervening in the Island's Brolls-The Attitude of the United States Uncertain.

By Telegraph to The Times. Paris, June 20.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] The Haytian minister here received a letter from the Haytian Secretary of State, dated Port-au-Prince, saying:

Port-au-Prince, saying:
On Corpus Christi day, May 28, President Hippolyte was attending religious ceremonies in the cathedral at Port-au-Prince, when a band of desperadoes attacked the prison, forced open the doors and liberated the prisoners therein confined. The band then started for the presidential palace hoping to surprise and assignate President Hippolyte and cabinet ministers. The former promptly mobilized his forces and soon managed to suppress the revolt. The leaders of the revolutionary movement were placed under arrest and ary movement were placed under arrest and anumber of their accomplices were also made prisoners. Rigaud was shot after convincing proof having been furnished that he was not a French subject.

The Secretary of State's letter concludes with the remark that the country is now tranquil and will remain so.

The Siccle today says European cabinets are discussing the expediency of taking united action in order to restore order in Hayti. In the cabinet council held today it was decided to demand reparation from Hayti for the shooting of Hippolyte of Rigaud on the ground that he was a French subject.

everal Persons Killed-Property Damages Aggregating $500,000.

Kentucky and Illinois Also Visited by the Destroyer-A Long Chapter of Losses and Casualties.

By Telegraph to The Times. KANSAS CITY, June 20.- By the Associated Press. | The southeastern orner of Kansas was visited by terrific storms last nights, causing some loss of life, much damage to property generally and enormous damage to growing crops. The storm was of a different nature at different points. At Fort Scott it took the form of a cloudburst, at Kansas City, of a cyclone, and at Emporia of a tornado. At Fort Scott the water poured down for half an hour. Dams were washed away and the creek swelled to vast proportions, flooding the bottoms four or five feet deep, and endangering the lives of many families who reside there. The occupants of houses escaped as best they could. Some escaped as best they could. Some climbed trees, while others were rescued by relief parties in boats. One of the relief boats was manned by John Connolin, Jr., Joe Osman and F. W: Bowman, members of the fire company. Their boat proved leaky and had to be abandoned, Connolin being drowned. Farmers from the surrounding country report great loss to standing crops, aggregating not less than

ing crops, aggregating not less than $150,000. Many bridges were washed $150,000. Many bridges were washed out.

At Kansas City the storm developed into a cyclone. Little damage was done in the city, but fitteen miles from the city the cyclone destroyed the homes of John Bowman, M. Bennet, Sam Brown, K. Kersey and William Brown. Elizabeth Bowman, mother of John Bowman, was fatally injured. A large number of barns and granaries were wrecked. The damage to crops in a radius of twenty miles from Arkansas City is estimated at $50,000.

kansas City is estimated at $50,000.
At Emporia the storm was a tornado accompanied by extraordinary rain.
Three and a half inches of water fell in less than two hours. Every cellar was flooded and the floors of many houses were covered with water. In the country crops were leveled to the ground. The damages are estimated at $50,000.

At Chanute, Kan., the worst wind and rainstorm ever known struck the town and lasted about forty minutes. About two thousand acres of wheat were ruined, entailing a loss of $20,000. The storm could not have come at a worse time for the crops. Wheat was a worse time for the crops. Wheat was just ready for the reaper, and in some places had already been cut and stacked. Much where the storm struck is a total loss, and the rest is badly damaged. Corn had just got a fair start and was in no condition to withstand the heavy storm. Much of it was washed away, and much will have to be replanted. to be replanted.

Comparatively meagre reports are received from the country districts, and a full estimate of the damage to crops cannot be made. From the facta at hand, however, it is estimated that the total loss will fall short of $500,000.

A CYCLONE IN ILLINOIS. edand Orcha

Leveled to the Ground. ST. Louis, June 18 .- [By the Associated Press.] A special to the Republic from Effingham, Ill., says: "A cyclone, accompanied by a deluge of rain, passed ten miles southwest of here this afternoon. John Brennan was fatally hurt by flying timbers. Houses and barns were demolished, growing crops destroyed and orchards leveled to the ground.

"The details, which are meagre, reand barns on farms owned by John Brennan, John Wienback and John Good. More complete particulars may tell of greater destruction to life and

KENTUCKY VISITED. Houses Blown Down and the Low-

Louisville, June 20.—[By the Assoclated Press.| Several local storms occurred in several sections in Kentucky today. Heavy rains flooded the lowlands in the vicinity of Paducal and some damage was done to crops.

At Rivera, near Greenville, seven houses were blown away and four persons were injured. Near Lewisport Oscar Madden's barn was blown down and Dave Ray (colored) was crushed to death. At Lewisport the Methodist church was wrecked. At Campbellsburg several houses were destroyed.

An Embezzier Arrested. NEW YORK, June 20.—Cazar Cesnola, who had charge of the agency of the German American Insurance Company, of North Adams, Mass., for some years, resigned his position about four years, resigned his position about four weeks ago and came to this city. A telegram has been received from the Chief of Police of North Adams re-questing that Cesnola be arrested. It is said after Cesnola resigned, his books were overhauled and a shortage of $30,000 was discovered. He was ar-rested and remanded.

Birchail Made a Confession Wade of Woodstock was here and told a leading citizen that Birchall, who was hanged for the murder of Benweil, confessed to him, but he had refrained from making it public because it would criminate another party.

A SCENE OF HORROR

The Frightful Death of James

LITERALLY ROASTED ALIVE

In the Presence of a Large Crowd, Who Were Unable to Render Any Assistance to the Unfortunate Man.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock Friday night James Taylor, who resides on Rosedale avenue, just below the University, with his brother Peter and their mother, met with a most frightful death when their house was burned to the ground, a brief mention of which appeared in THE TIMES columns yesterday morning.

Coroner Weldon held an inquest on the ains yesterday morning and brought out the following facts:

The family had their evening meal at 5 o'clock and retired quite early, at they are in the habit of doing, but Mrs. Taylor became nervous, for some reason, and got up. She walked out in the back yard, and after looking around the stable she returned to the house, and asshe passed the kitchen she noticed a light, and on opening the door she found the whole room in a blaze. She rushed upstairs and found both sous sound asleep. Peter aroused at once and after dressing himself he assisted his brother, who seemed to be dazed. The alarm had been given and the neighbors began to arrive, but as the house was built of a light, dry material it burned so rapidly that the filmes had reached the second story before anything could be done in the way of removing the furniture.

But this time Mrs. Taylor and Peter discovered to their terror that James was so rattled that they could do nothing with him. He absolutely refused to leave the house and seemed to have suddenly become a raving maniac. The unther took him by one arm and Peter the other and attempted to drag him down stairs, but his strength was so great that they could not budge him from the spot where he stood.

The flames were rapidly cutting off their way of escape, and as Mrs. Taylor was determined to ret her unfortunate son out of the burning building, Peter picked her up in his arms and plunged down the burning stairway. He was only just in time, for had they remained a few seconds longer, no power under the sun could have saved them. Just as Peter's foot reached the last step the whole thing came down with a crash and the unfortunate James was left on the second fiver as if suspended over an immense furuace.

As soon as Peter had deposited his fainting mother in a place of safety he rushed The family had their evening meal at 5 mense furnace.

As soon as Peter had deposited his fainting mother in a place of safety he rushed back in a vain belief that he might yet save his brother, but he was too late, and he could do nothing but stand among his neighbors and watch one of the most frightful signts that man was ever called upon to witness.

The crowd stood within a few yards of the burning building, and every motion of the miserable James was as plain to their view as if it had been broad daylight and view as if it had been broad daylight and he performing on an immense suspended platform for their benefit. The waits of the upper story had fallen away, leaving the floor naked with the exception of the furniture and the maniac, who rushed from one spot to another in a most trantle manner.

The flames and smoke surrounded him on all sides and there was no escape, even had he desired to leave the place, which he did not wish to do, or he would have jumped through the flames to the ground below, as some of the horrified spectators called to him to do so.

him to do so.

The floor became hotter and hotter, and

The floor became notice and botter, and the poor unfortunate, whose feet were be-ginning to bilster, danced around in a most slokening manner, at the same time giving out the most heart-rending cries and gro. ns. His calls were anything but human, and sent a thrill through the breasts of the cumstances.

The neighbors succeeded in saving a few pieces of furniture, but they could do but little, as there was hardly any water, and even had the engines reached the fire, the house could not have been saved.

The house, which was a two-story cottage, was insured for $800, and the furniture for $900.

The product is a fine lubricating oil, and is said to be worth $4 a barrel. The well is full to the very brim, and runs over a little, about four barrels escaping in a day and running down a creek near by, which it has painted in gaudy colors for miles.

There is also a discharge of gas, which may possibly serve to run the pumping works.

Having demonstrated that their experiment was a success, the projectors organized a company for further business. The first well being now completed and ready for its pump, the boring outfit is to be moved to a neighboring hill on the Rimpau ranch, where a second well is to be sunk. At the same time the company is sinking a four-foot shaft on the Bailerino place with the promise of striking a bed of crystallized brea or a ledge of coal, which Mr. Bailerino uncovered in digging a well many years ago.

The Engineer Says the Cost Will not Exceed $350,000-Meeting of the Finance Committee-Building Permits.

City Engineer Dockweller has about completed his plans and estimates for the pro-posed outfail sewer, on which he has been engaged for some weeks past. A very thor-bugh survey has been made of several routes, and a large amoust of useful infor-mation has been got in available shape. Yesterday fternoon an informal conference was held by the Councilmen in the Engineer's office, when Mr. Dockweller explained his plans at some length. When the floor fell he went headlong into the wint-heast of the basement, and after a few convulsive struggles all was still.

At this moment the tittle audience seemed to realize for the first time that they were not in a horrible nightmare and a xeneral rush was made to the now demolished building in a vain effort to recover the b-dy.

Prospectus.

This Corporation has been formed for the purpose of purchasing. holding and utilizing Lake Elsinore as a Storage Reservoir for the purpose of supplying water for Irrigation, Domestic, Lighting and other

It is designed to restrict the operation to these four purposes unless otherwise sanctioned by the shareholders in general meeting.

Too much weight cannot be attached to the value of this class of seing largely removed from the danger of competition and their history shows them to be the most remunerative of public enterprises. The growth of Irrigation Districts has been so great in the past few years, especially since the passage of the Wright Act, that existing systems of water supply have become overburdened and insufficient.

The directors believe that the present issue of capital can be employed in such works and plant as will prove both safe and remunerative, and they feel fully justified in anticipating a very prefitable return for the investors. And as an apposite quotation they submit the following extract from an annual issued by the Maverick National Bank of Boston, Mass., U. S. A., dated July

"In the whole history of water works there have been but three instances of foreclosure of first mortgage bonds, and, in these three cases, no loss was sustained by the holders. "It is evident that no other class of securities can show such a record of immunity from risk. This Bank has placed many loans of water companies, and has yet to hear of a dissatisfied investor. "Water company bonds are a security on productive property, of which the productiveness is constantly increasing." Every sentence in the above applies with equal force to the investment of capital in FULLY PAID STOCK, especially when offered as this is at a large discount. It will be further guaranteed that no subsequent issue of capital stock shall be made at a lower or at as low a figure

Applications for stock shall be made on the forms accompanying the Prospectus, and sent with a deposit of $1.00 per share to one of the Prospectus and Forms of Application can be obtained at the offices of the Company, corner of First and Spring streets, Los Angeles, or from the bankers or officers of the company.

THE LAKE.

This vast natural Storage Reservoir is situated in the northwesterly portion of San Diego County and is contained inside the boundaries of a Mexican Grant; elevation is 1280 feet above the ocean; this gives it its great claim for usefulness as can be realized by comparison with the elevation of the famous Riverside Colony which is 380 feet below it. This means that all the land between that place and Los Angeles, except the extreme high foothills, can be reached by a gravity flow from this lake. The same is equally true in the other direction by way of Murietta, all the vast valleys above San Diego are in reach.

Lake Elsinore is eighteen miles around its shore line with a length of five miles and an average width of three. In depth the larger portion of it is fifty feet and it at present holds sufficient water to irrigate 670,000 acres of land. Should one-sixth of that number of acres come under its flow at a foot-acre calculation, from that moment the Capital Stock becomes equal to its par value.

The rain-shed tributary to this lake is about Four Hundred Square Miles and as the cultivation of the land of northern San Diego County increases so does the inflow into the lake increase. So much so is this the fact that last winter the lake rose 5.21 feet in twenty-four hours; in other words seven billion gallons of water flowed into it during

It is not possible to do justice to the merits of this project in the ex tent of a short prospectus, but the directors and officers of the Company will cheerfully accord any further information that may be desired.

IT really looks as if the insurgents are gaining ground in Chile, although it is hard to gather the truth from the numerous confl cting reports which are afloat. A correspondent of the New York Sun, at San José. Costa Rica.

I was talking this morning with se gentlemen returned recently from Chite, and was surprised at the feeling they displayed against Balmaceda. One of them went so far as to say that he thought Balmaceda was not in his right mind. He says he only wonders how the Chileans, supposedly an enlightened and progressive people, have put up with it as long as they have. Haim ceda, he says seems to have have. ### LUXURIOUS LIVING.

The tendency of the present age is toward luxurious living. In the most extravagant period of Roman power, when marble troughs were constructed for horses, and the horses of the Emperor were shod with gold, money was not spent more freely than it is n these modern days by the wealthy classes of democratic America. The palaces of Rome were not more splendid in their furnishings, the golden vessels in which their bonquets were served were not more elegant or costly than are often now found in the palatial homes of many of our millionaires today.

American simplicity in the homes of the rich is a thing of past generations. The American has learned to spend money lavishly. His Roman charlot is a palace car, fuller of luxury and devices for comfort than was ever dreamed of by Roman conqueror or imperialist. From ocean to ocean he can travel in it with every want supplied and every appliance for his ease provided.

Luxury was never before so much a science as it is today. Human invention has been called upon in every direction to supply the most extravagant desires and to satisfy the most extended demands. Money will purchase everything that can be desired-except happiness. It is a power in governmenta affairs, both of the State and Nation. It is insinuating, and seductive, and bold. Corrupt political alliances spring from it. It is the lever which has raised many a man in this Republic to places of trust and honor, which, without it, would have been filled by better men.

It is to be questioned if the man of extraordinary wealth is, on the average, as content or as useful as the man who has but a simple competency. is most actively employed upon something that is worthy of it. We are so constituted that mere money-getting does not afford us the highest pleasure. Neither is it the ordinary tendency o great wealth to make men philanthropists or public beneractors. A little honest toll is good for us all. The tendency of the times toward extravagance and the inordinate ambition for wealth and luxury are by no means hopeful signs for the future generations of the Republic. Human na ture is the same in all ages the world over. Luxury always has tended, and always will tend, toward demoralizaion. There never was a republic boin in its lap, and there never will be. THE HORTICULTURAL BUREAU

During the past few days the fight over the chieftaincy of the of the World's Fair bureau of herticulture has been growing decidedly interest ng. A Cuicago dispatch to the Chronicle, dated the 18 h, says:

Chronicle, dated the 18 h, says:

Col. Davis' introduction to the committee was decidedly breezy. He told the members, after reviewing the cases of Walter faxwell and Geo. Chipman, that he had ot been putting men up just to have them nocked down. "What we want," he said, "is a chief for that department, and we want num right away."

Some protest against Forsyth came in while Col. Davis was talking. A. T. Hatch, member of the California State commission, dropped around to tell the committee hat Mr. Forsyth would not suit the people of California half so well as Gen. Chipman, ite also was breezy. One man said he was mpudent.

Personally I denounce Mr. Hatch as a contemptible fiar and scoundrel.

ANOTHER VALUABLE TREE. Fresh varieties of valuable trees and shrubs are constantly being introduced into California, and, as a rule, they do well-better in many cases than in the countries whence they came. There seems scarcely any limit to the variety of vegetation that will flourish in this

An earnest attempt is now being made to domesticate the camphor tree in the United States. It is a yery ornamental plant and has been used to some extent as a shade tree. Interest in the growing of camphor trees ha recently been stimulated by the great increase in the price of gum camphor, aused by the quantities of the article which have been used in the manufacture of smokeless powder, and also by the increasing demand from makers of celluloid goods both in this country and in Europe. For nearly thirty years seeds of the camphor tree have been distributed by our Department of Agriculture. the seed, and the Department of Agriculture has frequently received seeds from this source which, when sown in garden, as a common garden pea is sown, rapidly vegetate and form plants from eighteen inches to two feet in height the first season. While the camphor tree flourishes best in warm climates. it will stand 200 of frost without being injured, and any locality where the thermometer does not show lower than 200 F. is fitted for the growth of the plant. A large number of trees were raised by the United States Department of Agriculture in 1877 from seed sent from South Carolina, where trees are growing. Plants obtained from this seed were sent into the Southern States, mainly as ornamental or shade trees. It was found that it answered well as a shade tree, especially in Fiorida, though not much was expected of it in the way of producing camphor as a commercial product. The Department of Agriculture will have a large supply of camphor trees ready for distribution next spring, inquiries having been received from many localities regarding the domestication of the tree in this country. Camphor trees have done well in California. A camphor tree in Yuba county, in fourteen years, reached a height of fifty feet. One recommendation of the tree for ornament alone is its exemption from jusect parasites which, especially in the coast regions, trouble all indigenous evergreens and materially stunt their growth.

> A SPEECH BY THE KAISER. The Emperor closed the Lundtag to day in a characteristic manner. He congratulated himself and the country on getting from the upper and lower houses of the Landtag nearly all that his ministry had demanded. During the course of his speech, His Majesty said: "Although the aims! constantly hold in view have not been wholly attained, I and my people may, nevertheless, derive just satisfaction from the fact that a necessary and va uable system of taxation and the primary conditions and a valuable basis have been agreed upon for the reform in the system of taxation. The primary conditions have been by law determined for the improvement of commune institutions in the rural districts of Prussia."

These references to projects which had been forced upon the upper house were listened to in gloomy silence. The Emperor then proceeded to ex The Emperor then proceeded to express the hope that the taxation question still remaining unsettled would find an equally satisfactory settlement. NOTES FROM ABROAD.

Work of Prominent Writers Ex-cuded from English Schools. LONDON, June 20.—[By Cable and Associated Press.] Herbert Spencer's work on "Education" and Bain's "Education as a Science" prescribed by government educational departmen have been put under proscription by the authorities of church training colleges. Both books are better known in America than in this country and probably few American educational societies of the most orthodox type, would object to them on the ground of heterodoxy, but the clerical intolerance of church training colleges have protested and the education department meekly submitted.

Don't gather your fruit till it is ripe enough to eat out of the hand. More fruit is injured by being picked too green than too ripe. Apricots should not be allowed to fall to the ground, but should be carefully picked by hand into haskets. There picked by hand into baskets. There is a most complete picking ladder now on the market, although my neighbor thinks the most perfect plan is to drive thinks the most perfect plan is to drive under the trees with a spring wagon, and plck from the wagon, pouring from the small baskets into boxes carried in the wagon. This is a good way where one does all his own plcking. But where one has several men pfcking ten bours a day, the more practical way is to draw the boxes of fruit out of the orchard on a sled. Most all the cutting and pitting of the fruit is done cutting and pitting of the fruit is done by hand with a knife. There are now several good machines for doing this work, two kinds of which I intend using this season.

The Inn in Literature.

The Inn in Literature.

The social importance of the inn in days of old is proved by the conspicuous position it holds in our fiction and poetry. The "Canterbury Tales" of Chaucer start from an inn, along with the motley company of pilgrims bound for St. Thomas shrine, to whom the geaius of the poet has given an immortal life. Its site and name, the "Talbot," or "Tabard," still preserve the memory of the site and name, the "Talbot," or "Ta-bard," still preserve the memory of the famous inn thus associated with our first great English poem. It was not, however, until the reign of Elizabeth that the tavern attained to a permanent place in literature, reflecting the important place it held in the daily life of the people.—All the Year Round.

Why should li great banking institutious attribute stagnation and hard times to scarcity of money, while they are exerting all their powers to make money scarce by adhering to the gold standard, when they admit that there is not enough gold to maintain the business and credit of the commercial world? For eighteen years the basis of our credit on the gold standard has been extended, and the production of gold has failen off while the structure of credit has been growing proportionately larger and more insecure until the relation of credit to actual money, as disclosed in the Barings' failure on the gold standard of England, has alarmed the world and started a new scramble for gold, that threatens all business undertakings and stalks as a menace to every legitimate enterprise.

Though, as a rule, Spaniards of the better class are not early risers, they begin the day with the desayuno, as they call the meal. This usually consists of a large cup of milk and coffee, or a small cup of thick chocolate, with a kind of take called ensaimada. The chocolate CORONADO -THE-

A spoon, fork and knife lumped together, a tumbler for water and a small wineglass are set at SEASIDE

A Spaniard never commits the heresy of mixing wine and water; he says it is spoiling two good things. A goodly sized loaf of bread flanks each plate. The soup tureen is first handed round, and, although its contents are a trifle greasy, nothing can be more nourishing. It is compounded of all the good things that go to make up the classical cocido or puchero. The substantial portion and indicate the substantial portion 208 W. etables with slices of chorizo, or sausage. The cocido is usually eaten as it is, though in some houses tomato sauce is added. The puchero, or cocido, takes its name from the pewter pot in which it is slowly boiled. In every well regulated home throughout Spain the cocido is made once a day, and a right good is made once a day, and a right good thing it is, as at any hour you may chance to need a cup of broth you can be supplied with it. The next dish is the frito. Frito means a fry, and the dish usually consists of fried brains, fried sweetbread, croquettes of fowl, etc.

In no country are things fried better than in Spain, because good clive oil is used to fry them in, and oil makes those oil may be turned to good account for anything in cooking will no doubt cause unbounded surprise. There is no deny-ing the fact, however. Food ill prepared with oil is no doubt a trying case in so far as the palate and nostrils are con-cerned, but a good Spanish cook knows well how to disguise the taste of the oil in many ways.

The simplest and perhaps the best advice is to let the oil come to a boiling point and to throw in a piece of bread, which is taken out as soon as it become brown and thrown away. This takes off any bad taste the oil may have. The pan is then carried to an open window and the steam blown away, a process which as effectually clears it of any un savory smell.—Boston Transcript

Nearly Everybody Is Superstitious. "The amount of mental suffering ignorant people undergo from the fear of ill omens being fulfilled is inconceivable to persons of well balanced minds." rell known physician.

This doctor spent two years at one of the charity hospitals on Ward's Island, and while there had an excellent oppor-tueity for observing thilly peculiarities and various phases of humanity among the outcasts of a great city. Continuing after a short reverie the doctor said: "Of course superstitions have existed and will exist as long as there remains a belief in the mysteries of future life. It is seldom admitted by persons of intelligence that they are, to a greater or less degree, at all subject to the uneasy feeling an uncanny event will produce. But it is really an exceptional thing to find a person who has no superstitions whatever. Generally the presentiments are so unimportant that they are but seldom alluded to by the one experiencing them, and are soon forgotten. But that they do exist in nearly every mind is undoubtedly true."—Chicago News.

Correcting the Teacher In one of the Springfield grammar schools the teacher was explaining an example in arithmetic on the blackboard, and had finished it with the exception of the last two figures of the answer, which was in dollars and cents, when she was called out of the room. On returning one of the pupils raised her hand and said, "There are some cents to the answer in the book, but there isn't any on the board." "Why, Nellie, what do you mean by speaking to me like that?" the teacher exclaimed in anger. After the school had been in a roar of laughter for fully a minute it dawned on the teach er's mind that it was "cents" instead of "sense" that the girl was talking about.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Are Bankers Veracious Usually or Otherwise.

INCOMPETENT BANK EXAMINERS

The Influx of Jews from Russia-History of Israelites in This Country-Making a Home.

The old question of taxing the banks is again before the Council, and the discussion of the subject has developed some interesting facts.

The official reports show nearly $25,-000,000 of assets belonging to the banks in this city, and nearly that sum in noney on deposit or owing to depositors. But the depositors-those who are supposed to be liable for the taxes on money in bank, only claim, in their reports to the assessor, to own a fraction over $600,000. This wast discrepancy and the real reason why the assessor of the depositors' ledger. The discrepancy seems to be due to the discrepancy seems to be due to the discrepancy seems to be due to the conjustion by the depositors to mention. reports to the assessor, to own a fraction over $600,000. This vast discrepancy of more than $20,000,000 is not omission by the depositors to mention their deposits in the returns made to the assessor. It is surprising how much perjury is filed away in the office of an assessor.

Are bankers more truthful than other business men? is a question frequently asked. If the long list of wicked national banks is taken as a basis of judgment, the answer would be that they, too, are often careless in the matter of subscribing to affidavits. In fact, the more the national bank law is tested, the more general becomes the belief that it is the most insecure method of banking ever, adopted by a nation. The checks and guards which that law has been supposed to throw around the funds of the depositor, have proven to be of no benefit other business men? is a question frequently asked. If the long list of tor, have proven to be of no benefit where the bank officials were reckless or dishonest.

National bank examiners are falling National bank examiners are falling into disrepute because of their admitted incompetency to discharge the duties of the office which they hold. In their appointment the question of fitness is never looked into by the treasury officials. Some political worker, having a "puli" with a Senator because of campaign services is given the place. When a bank has failed, and its assets are entirely used up some of the officers call in the bank examiner and the clerks proceed to hunt up iner and the clerks proceed to hunt up the cause of the failure, which they usually locate several years previous to the closing of the institution.

It is claimed that the assessor has the right to increase an assessment when he believes that the property owner has placed the value too low. If this power is vested in him or in the Board of Equalization, and the returns made by the banks are not satisfactory, they should be assessed—and let the courts determine the justice and legal-ity of the method. It the sewingwoman or mechanic makes a return to the assessor, and it—like the returns of the merchant and farmer—is only for one-third of the value of the property, the assessor has but one remedy, and that is a criminal proceeding for and that is a criminal proceeding for perjury.

A few days ago I got a list of names of business men in the city and the amounts of insurance carried by them on their places of business and their homes. A visit to the Assessor's office disclosed the fact that only one of these men returned the value of his these men returned the value of his property for taxation at one-half the amount of his insurance, while the others ranged from 20 to 33 per cent of the insurance. If this question is gone into, why not overhaul the whole list, and reach a result which will establish and reach a result which will establish a rule for valuations for taxation.

A prominent Jew of this city, in discussing the kindly mentions of his co-religionists by THE TIMES said to me: "The greatest danger which now threatens the American .ew is the influx of Russian Jews. They are ignorant, many of them dishonest, and all are dirty. I wish the immigration laws would prohibit their landing." threatens the American ew is the in born Jew, amazed me. For more than a thousand years the inhabitants of Christian countries have been engaged in the shameful work of prosecuting the Jews. To them the religion of the meek and lowly Nazarene has been an excuse for the most frightful crime against the race to whom the world is indebted for its moral civilization. Americans should be above even a prejudice of this kind.

No foreign immigrant so quickly be-comes Americanized as the Jew. No matter where he was born—in En-gland, France, Germany or the Russian provinces—it takes but a fev years to make a genuine Yankee of him. The Irish look to Ireland, the German has his societies which keep alive the memories and interest in the land of his birth: the Englishman and the Scotchman look back with longing eyes to the land of their birth, while their bearts are filled with respect for the governmental institutions whose oppressions they fled to our shores. But the Jew has no home, no abiding place except this land of his choice, and he teaches his children the blessings of American liberty. As a class they are law-abiding and self-supporting.

How few people now recall the fact that in the darkest hours of our civil war, Mr. Lincoln appealed to the Jewish bankers of Germany through Rabbi Lillienthal of Cincinnati to take our bonds, and quickly they responded. The colonel of one of the regiments in which I served was a beyon orn in Hungary, and rose from second-lieutenant to brigadier-general by his courage and ability. One hundred and thirty of the soldiers in that regiment were Jews-good soldiers-many of whom gave their lives for the Union.

Even here in California we forget that the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad was built by Jewish money, when other capitalists would not invest one cent in the enterprise.

SAN FRAN DISCO MARKETS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jube 20.—[Special to THE TIMES.] The produce markets were unusually dull this morning, and there are very few changes it: quotations. There is no demand for whitet and quotations are almost nominal. New barley is coming in freely but sales are light, as buyers are exceptive, lower prices. There is no characteristics for the product of pecting lower prices. There is no change pecting lower prices. There is no change in mill-stuffs.

Most of the summer fruit now coming in is only fit for table use, and in consequence the demand is not sufficient to offset the supplies. Cherries keep up fairly well. Currants are fower. Peaches are hard and sell slowly. Strawber-les did better. Apricots are plentiful and cheaper.

The vegetable market is dull. Potatoes broke back under excess of supplies and light demand. Onions are also easier for both red and yellow. Asparagus is slow of sale.

Those of Charles Dudley Warner's personal friends and admirers in Pasadena, who happened to read a criticism on his work by the E. J. Edwards as published in yesterday's issue of the Herald, were much amused thereby. Among other things Mr. Edwards says: "Dickens had written his last story when he was just about the age that Mr. Warner was when he wrote his first novel, entitled 'A Little Journey Around the World.' ... The story was successful in a certain measure, for it was approved by the cultivated readers, and yet, after all, its charm consisted wholly in the display of the same qualities which had given Mr. dena, who happened to read a criticism same qualities which had given Mr. Warner repute as a delightfulessayist. He had used the machinery of conver-He had used the machinery of conver-sation, and connected the story by making it hinge upon such adventures as are indicated in the title—'A Little Journey Around the World.'" As a matter of fact Mr. Warner never wrote any such book. He did write "A Little Journey in the World," but the book had nothing to the with a openmanication of the

do with a circumnavigation of the globe, nor is it a story of adventure, as Mr. Edwards would have his readers believe. After reading the book and acquainting himself with the interesting heroine, who really did but little traveling, this would-be critic may find himself in a position to write something sensible on the subject.

It is a matter for congratulation that the Choral Society is to be organized on a permanent footing. This is the most ambitious musical organiza-tion Pasadena has ever had, and it bids fair to be the most successful.

The Artifice and Audacity of British Game Marauders-Their Character, Methods and Woodcraft Illustrated-Interesting

Personal Experiences.

[Copyright, 1891, by Edgar L. Wakeman.]

Carliste, England, June 8.—My first introduction to a British poacher was in the ancient city of Galway on a summer's morning in 1888. I wandered out of Blie Madigan's quaint little inn before sunrise, and after a few moments on the quay among the fishwives of Claddagh had started for a stroll out Oughterard way. As I was crossing Queen's bridge my attention was attracted by hundreds upon hundreds of salmon in the shallow waters of the Corrib beneath. They lay, bunched in groups of scores and more, in little pockety pools of the greatest depth, their noses pointing up stream, but all the shoals apparently as motionless as the rocky bed of the river beneath them. It was early for Galway, save at the Claddagh side, as the sleepy old town is hardly astir before 9 o'clock. But I had stood there scarcely a minute when a man in corduroy, highlows, jockey cap and visor, and bearing a huge club in his hand, approached me from the city side. He gave me a sharp look of scrutiny, touched his hat apologetically and walked smartly away. He was one of the royal fishery board water bailiffs, and was in quest of salmon poachers.

He was hardly out of sight before a bare-A discussion followed on Franklin's life and works, led by Prof. Housh. The next meeting will be held on the evening of July 10. Richard Gibbings was buried yester-Dr. McCoy of Los Angeles was in The overlands are running with surprising precision.

He was hardly out of sight before a barefooted man followed upon the bridge. He in turn scrutinized me closely and passed.
A moment later the man's arm slid along A moment later the man's arm slid along the waist high stone coping of the bridge. Then there was a gentle splash in the water below. The man kept straight on, increasing the speed of his walk. Directly I saw his arm jerked back, as if by a sudden grasp from the bridge side over the coping. Then he seemed to exert very great strength, while there was some little commotion in the stream beneath. When near the end of the bridge he turned, put his elbows upon the coping in an attitude of bows upon the coping in an attitude of contemplation, and waited thus for a few minutes. Finally he passed off the bridge end and turned toward the bay. With-out seeming to watch him, I soon saw him reappear near an old fulling mill several Some members of the Athletic Club will indulge in a cross-country run this

With him there was now a mangy head With him there was now a mangy head-ed lad, who was hastily unrolling the bot-toms of his trousers with one hand, while carrying his jacket in a singularly heavy and baggy way with the other. The bare-footed man had within three minutes' time captured two huge salmon with a murderous "drag hook" armed with six huge hooks, and the lad with the property murderous "drag hook" armed with six huge hooks; and the lad with the pouchy jacket, who had rejoined him, was in wait-ing beneath the bridge end to care for fish, hooks and line. In fitteen minutes more the two salmon were dressed and in the "herring skibs" of the fishwives, being hawked about the city; and the Corrib poacher had secured eight shillings for his deft morning's work.

poacher had secured eight shillings for his deft morning's work.

My next experience was while a guest during a pheasant shoot on the demesne of a young nobleman in one of the English midland counties. Some time during the day's murderous onslaught upon the birds I had lost a diminutive, but to me valuable retained. It as world mathematically the provided mathematically and the statement of the second sec notebook. It so worried me that I arose the next morning, dressed and stole down into and out of the castle yard through the huge open gate facing the side next the demesne, before a soul was astir about the entire place. I felt sure of my ability to discover the locality of the previous day's battue by following to the right the demesne wall, which must lead to the little patch of low open copse where the pheasants had been driven by the "beating" of the attendants, a number of whom, noted for their woodcraft, and who were loungers at the near village, had been pressed into service. The wall surrounding the demesne service. before a soul was astir about th service. The wall surrounding the den was of rough stone and rubble, conical at the top, its crest being rendered seemingly impassable by murderous pieces of broken glass imbedded in the mortar. It was hardly daylight, and a thick mist rendered ordinary objects still more indistinct. I therefore simply followed the wall closely, now and then touching it with a stout walking stick I had taken with me from walking stick I had taken with me from my chamber, but oftener touching it gently at intervals with my hand.

I was not long in passing the line of heavier forest and reaching the open place where I felt sure the previous day's slaughter of pheasants had occurred; and just as my hand left the wall, following my impulse of search over the shooting ground, my fingers came in contact with the bushy hair of a mon's had. my fingers came in contact with the bushy hair of a man's head. I am not exactly an hair of a man's head. I am not exactly an athlete, but that hair and the man under it came up alongside of that demesne wall to nearly my own height, as the Germans say, "Im augenblick!" and I instantly saw I had taken, red handed, a fine specimen of the English poacher. The fact was all the more interesting as I recognized in the precious rascal one of the "beaters" employed by milord's gameksepers during the previous day's sport. He was a handsome, dirty, chunky fellow of twenty or thereabouts, and he knew how to beg as well as poach.

It occurred to me I could utilize this particular "misplaced matter" both on the lines of acquiring information and in the recovery of my notebook. A proper compact had no sooner been agreed upon than two of the poacher's companions, agree-Fresh "La N" Butter two of the poacher's companions, agreeable to his signal, appeared. One was a weazened old man, spry as a cricket, and the other was a lad of perhaps fifteen years. The latter at once produced what I had made my quest for, and got a half crown for his trouble. Then in a few moments' hasty explanation I secured a good idea of what had been going on in that quarter during the night. quarter during the night.

All three had been employed by the All three had been employed by the gamekeepers the previous day as "beaters" and "helpers," the latter to watch for the falling birds and carry them brok to "the bags." A large number were thus stowed away in secure coverts for the following night's work. The poachers well knew that after the evening's tips, beer, pipes and boastful stories in the servants' hall and harness prome years cannekeeper would and harness room, every gamekeeper would sleep soundly that night if not another in the year. They were therefore over the demesne wall and at work long before mid night. Their outfit was simple and inex pensive. A strong rope about twelve feet long with triple nooses, one in the middle well bound for securing a fastening on the jagged wall coping, and another at each end, answering for a ladder. A hand cart, the wheels wound with straw and rags to prevent noise and lessen the trail, with a fourth man beside it as a sentinel, was brought along for carrying away the plun-

Fow people in America, or for that mate the been, have any adequate idea of the tree mendous sums annually expended in the preservation and taking of game in England, Ireland and Scotland. On a former occasion I had need to secure the figures for Scotland alone. Hunting and fishing, with attendant expenses, annually cost British sportsmen in Scotland 200,00.000! What must the sum total consequently be for the three kingdoms? Here, then, is at once found the real origin of poachers and poaching. Every Briton is aborn sportsman. Hence with every square rod of ground under lease as a "shooting," and, every lineal rod of shore, of beck, burn, river, loch or harbor under lease to somebody as a "fishing," millions are debarred by the severest game laws in the world from any use whatever of the rod and gun, save by steath and illegally.

Low as is the scale of the professional poacher, it must not be supposed that he is a proscribed outlaw. British newspapers always discuss him from his humorous side. His vocation is everywhere known among villagers and countryside folk, and there are none so dastardly as to give him into the hands of officers. I personally know of many instances where poacher graduates have, become gamekeepers of the locks and deer forests in the vicinity of Fort William, Scotland. One is named Macewan, and there dare read and moorrigible of British poachers infest the locks and deer forests in the vicinity of Fort William, Scotland. One is named Macewan, and the other, a confirmed tramp poacher, is known about the region of Lock Ell as "Drousy Mog-tins." Macewan seems unvanguishable.

The lodge meeting, which was attended to the pro confirmed tramp poacher, is known about the region of Loch Eil as "Drousy Mog-ins." Macewan seems unvanquishable. In 1888 Lord Abinger, of Inverlochy House, obtained an interdict against him. He immediately secured its removal for £15, a part only of the proceeds of two days shooting in Lord Abinger's preserves, since which time his operations have not been interfered with. His greatest revenue the house of the state of the nues are, however, secured by night "sweeping" by seines of the pools of the river Lochy, hundreds of grilse or young salmon and some sea trout always being secured. "Drousy Mogius" is more of a poacher angler and less of a pirate. He wanders at angler and less of a pirate. He wanders at will among the Grampian trout streams, supplying the tables of the nobility with the choicest trout from their own streams, and has been offered fabulous sums for a glimpse of his marvelous "files." But a year since Lord Morton sent a young poacher resident on his Ardgour estate to Cameron of Loch Eil, begging him to employ him as a gillie in order to suppress his genius for poaching. An entire volume might be filled with similar incidents and illustrations.

Poaching is carried on among the vast deer forests and in stream and pool

Poaching is carried on among the vast deer forests and in stream and pool "sweeping" by net in a most lawless and defiant manner. It is simply impossible to provide sufficient gamekeepers and gillies to protect the forests from the inroads of poacher "stalkers," and the poachers of fish are so thoroughly organized, and in sudden conflicts with water bailiffs handle the latter so mercilessly, that the bailiffs usually seek seclusion rather than the maranders.

Genuine cunning, patience, with mar velous moor and woodcraft, are therefore more often found in those poachers who hang about the outskirts of well stocked "shootings" and preserves, alert as spar-row hawks or moor buzzards for poults of row hawks or moor buzzards for poults of ever description which have market value. Pheasant and grouse poaching bring the most profitable returns. Aside from the night raids described above, the ingenious device is resorted to of fitting a game cock with artificial spurs, and stealthily placing him alongside the pheasant of vert. The pugnacious pheasant cocks instantly respond to the game cock's crowing challenge, and often three or four brace of pheasants are thus taken.

Again in the highways near where pheas-ants are bred they may often be seen scratching and rolling in the dust of the road. The poacher provides himself with corn kernels into which short bristles have corn kernels into which short bristles have been inserted. These are greedily devoured, and the birds, choking to death in the hedges, are quickly and quietly dispatched. Grouse are taken by being shot from behind stone walls, an entire brood often being picked off at a time, if the poacher keeps himself out of sight; with the hair snares set on the moor hillocks, in the "runs" around them, and between the "rests" among the heather, and just before daybreak, by silk dragnets with glazed bottoms, on moors which are systematically burnt, an entire covey often being bagged at one sweep.

But the most detestable of all British poschers is that wholesale thief who rents for from twenty to eighty shillings, from some moorland farmer or yeoman, a tiny "hill shooting." He will see that it has a moorland stream and patches of sweet heather, and that it is sunny and sheltered. This is all that is required to comprise a favorite resort for moor game. It will also furnish a few hares and perhaps some black game among the bracken. To this spot covey after covey of moor birds will come for heather and water. They come in well defined flights, and alight in the very same place every morning. The moncher simply notes all these flights, courses, "dips" of flight and alighting grounds, and sets his flynets before day. They are heavy birds, fly straight and swift, They are heavy birds, fly straight and swift, and on striking the net become hopelessly entangled or drop stunned into the bag entangied or drop studied into the bag beneath. A moucher renting a "hillside shooting" at ferty shillings will thus often, without discharging a gun, take more game than can he shown as bagged at the end of a shooting season on the largest and hest conducted game preserves of Britain.

The Brethren of to Order Hold a Veritable Love-feast. SANTA MONICA, June 20.—[Correpondence of THE TIMES.] evening has gone on record as a notaole occasion in the memory of the Ma sonic fraternity of Santa Monica and vicinity. The first meeting under the brought along for carrying away the plunder.

The three who entered the grounds had long, lithe poles, each a "bull's-eye" lander, and between them sulphur or some such stuff and matches for making smudges. They knew every inch of ground "beaten" the day before, and also that the claim of roceys into detached files of pheasants and that these would retreat as high as possible among the branches of larch and fir. The fog, too, was in their favor. All night long they had methodically bunted out certain trees, discovered the pheasants within them, smudged them into half insensibility and deliberately knocked them from their perches, dispatching them the moment they fell by sinking their beastly thumbs in the brain of the befuddled brids. The work of gathering those which had been stolen from the "bag" the previous day was left until the break of day, and was just about completed as I had come upon the scene. ### Swift Filian Sailing Craft.

We saw to windward a native boat bearing down upon us under full stress of sail. A Fijian boat is made of a hollowed cocoanut log, sharpened at both ends. About ten feet on one side of it is placed a long and slender log of lighter wood, both parts of the craft being at once connected by and supporting a raised platform of bamboo. Such a boat floats on the water like a cork, and offers no more resistance than a racing shell. A mast set in the center of the platform supports a triangular sail of matting, with the base of the figure up-most. A very top heavy effect is thus produced, but nothing can overturn the light vessel owing to the breadth of its base, and it flies through the water like

The catamaran that pursued us easily kept up with the launch, although we drove it at full speed to keep ahead, and with the huge, misshapen mat sail flapping and rolling like a great bat's wing as the boat thrashed through the billows, and sent showers of spray over the glis-tening bodies of the dozen natives who stood or squatted upon the deck, the picture was something fascinatingly strange and barbaric and never to be forgotten When the boat was near us our ran under a jutting point, where thickly clustered palms cut off the wind, and the catamaran becoming becalmed got out oars and turned in for the shore.-Cor. uppermost in the minds of the fathers and mothers, wives and sweethearts who congregated on the wharf to bid good-bye to these fortunate seamen, and that was, it would be but a matter of six months, a flying trip between California and India, an excursion from San Diego to Calcutta, and not one of those commercial or exploring expeditions which keep a ship at sea for years, exposed to the most dangerous waters of both hemispheres. This crew knew what such expeditions were, and their families had often seen them sail away under conditions well qualified to cause grave apprehensions.

wharves of the Pacific Coast Steam-ship Company to give him a parting wharves of the Pacific Coast Steamship Company to give him a parting cheer.

The crew of the Dreadnaught was made up of ten abie-bodied seamen and master and mate. The sailors were all natives residents of San Diego, experienced men and glad of an opportunity to serve under Captain Allaire. The mate was an excellent officer, Roderlick Shelton by name. Although he was Allaire's senior by five or six years, this fact didn't gall him the least bit, nor did an envious or jealous thought ever enter his mind. He was the first to acknowledge that Alliare was the man for the post. They had been messmates for years, and had learned to appreciate each other. Besides, whatever William Hollister did was well done. Rod Shelton and his men were devoted to him, body and soul. Most of the crew had already shipped on some one or other of his vessels, and officers and men were really like one family.

So favorable, therefore, was the out-The Dreadnaught. There are two chances to one that friends who are about to be separated by a long voyage will never see each other again—those who are left behind may be missing upon the return; those who set out may never come back again. But no such thought as this bothered the heads of the seamen who were busily engaged in getting the Dreadnaught ready for sea on the morning of March 15, 1875. On that day the Dreadnaught, John Allaire, master, was to set sail from the port of San Diego, Cal. on a voyage through the seas of the northern Pacific.

The Dreadnaught, a three-master of 900 tonnage, belonged to that style of clipper-built ships which the Americans use so advantageously in their foreign trade and which in point of speed nearly rival the best steamers in their merchant marine. Such a finely-built vessel was the Dreadnaught, and so admirably commanded that not a man of her crew would have consented to ship on any other vessel even with an assurance of higher pay. Every heart throbbed, every breast was filled with that two-fold confidence based upon the certainty of having shipped upon the certainty of having shipped on a good vessel under a good captain. The Dreadnaught was about to leave port on her first voyage, excepting of course her trial trip, for account of her owners, the shipping house of Hollister & Co., of San Diego. Her port of destination was to be Calcutta which she was to reach by way of Singapore, with a cargo of American manufactured goods, and upon her return voyage she was to bring a consignment of East Indi, merchandise for one of the California ports.

position—that of a mate on one of the Hollister fleet of merchantmen. But there was good reason to assume that Molly would a me day or other inherit a large fortune from a rich uncle, Edward Manson, who was a large land speculator, and mill-owner in the western part of Tennessee. In the meantime, there were two people to support; yes, three, for little Walter—Walt as a pet name—had come into the world the first year of their marriage, therefore, the Captain—and the Captain's wife agreed with him—couldn't think of giving up the sea just yet. Later he would determine what would be the best thing for him to do, either after Molly had become an heiress or he had grown rich in the service of Hollister & Co.

Anyway, his career had been a brilliant one, and he now found himself captain of a splendid clipper ship, at an age when most of his associates were nothing more than first or second mates. But the fact is, his splendid qualifications were universally conceded, and it would have been hard to mates. But the fact is, his splendid qualifications were universally conceded, and it would have been hard to find a more popular man than Capt. Allaire, either in San Diego or in any other Californian port. The personal bravery displayed by him in rescuing a shipwrecked crew on one occasion, and in his skill and tenacity of purpose in effecting the salvage of a valuable cargo abandoned by master and seamen had abandoned by master and seamen, had made his name known to merchants and shippers all along the coast. The firm of Hollister & Co. offered him the command of the Dreadnaught,

"No, Mr. Hollister," replied Capt.
John, "I have no notion of risking the

the Sandwich Islands, the Marianas,

Colebes and Macassar Strait in order to reach Singapore through the Java point to Calcutta. I don't think that any winds that I may meet with in the west Pacific will force me to change this course. However, should you which was all ready to be launched. Allaire had accepted without the slightest hesitation, for he felt that he where I may touch, or at Singapore, where I certainly shall."

"Very well, John, and don't neglect to advise me at the very earliest possible moment of market prices in Calcutta. It may be that your report would lead me to make some changes with respect to the Dreadnaught's cargo on her return trip."
"You may rely upon me, Mr. Hollister," replied Allaire.
At this moment, Shelton approached:
"The anchor's atrip, Captain."
"And the ebb?"
"Is making itself felt."
"Stand by, then!"
Then turning to Mr. Hollister, Capt. John thus addressed him, his words having the genuine ring of gratitude in them:
"Once more Mr. Hollister, lat."

Aniare nad accepted without the slightest hesitation, for he felt that he was qualified to fill the position, and had been thereupon authorized to pick his officers and seamen, such was the perfect confidence which the house had in him. It was under these circumstances that the Dreadnaught was about to make her first voyage under the command of Capt. John Allaire.

The sailing of this splendid new clipper ship was quite an event. The firm of Hollister & Co. very justly enjoyed the reputation of being one of the wealthiest and most reputable shipping houses in San Diego, thanks to the wise administration of its affairs by William Hollister, a man respected by his competitors and beloved by his friends. Everyone was deligted when it became known that he had put John Allaire in command of the Dreadnaught. It was not surprising, therefore, that on this narticular more it became known that he had put John Allaire in command of the Dreadnaught. It was not surprising, therefore, that on this particular morning. March 15, a vast concourse of people, many of them personal friends, and all of them admirers of the young Captain, should have collected on the

"My darling, bear in mind that it's for the sake of our little one that I go; for your sake, too, in order to make sure the comfort and happiness of you both. Should our expectation with regard to a fortune ever be realized, then nothing shall ever separate us again."

At this moment Lew Barker and his were flying from the mizzen peak and from the main truck was displayed the house flag bearing the initials of Andrew Hollister & Co. The sails were loosened and all ready to be hoisted the moment the ship should get a little headway under the pressure of her ferestay sails and j.bs.

At this moment Lew Barker and his wife approached. John met them with Standing on the quarter-deck, with his watchful eye taking note of every-thing going on about him, was John

"My dear Lew," said he, "I leave my wife—my boy in your care. You and Kate are their only relatives in San Diego. Look after them well."

"Depend upon us, John," replied Barker, making an effort at some slight show of feeling. "Kate and I will do the right thing. Molly will have the best of care."

As the merchant handed the snip's papers and the bills of lading to the young Captain, he said:

"John, if circumstances should require you to modify your course, act according to your best judgment and let me hear from you from the first place you touch at. Perhaps you may touch at one of the Philipines, for I don't suppose you intend to pass will do the right thing. Molly will have the best of care."

"And all the consolation I can give her," added Mrs. Barker. "You know how I love you, dear Molly. We shall see each other often. I shall be with you every day for a few hours, which we shall devote to John."

"Ah, yes, Kate." replied her cousin. "he'll never he out of my thoughts."

"he'll never be out of my thoughts."
Again Shelton interrupted the oversation. "Captain," said he, "!

"All right, Rod," cried Allaire, "set the jib and flying jib,"
The mate turned away to execute these orders which pointed to an immediate departure.

"Mr. Hollister," said Allaire, "the ship's launch will take you and my wife and her relatives back to the wharf whenever you're ready."
"I'm all ready, John," answered the merchant, "once more good-bye and good luck."

good luck."

"Good-bye, good luck," cried the others as they made their way down the ladder to boats waiting for them.

"Good-bye, Lew, good-bye, Kate!" cried John extending his hand to them.

"Good-bye, good-bye!" cried Mrs. Barker.

"Good-bye, good-bye!" cried Mrs.
Barker.
"Come, my dear Molly, I'll go with you to the gangway," said Allaire.
The Dreadnaught has caught the breeze already. She's moving!"
Molly's heart was too full for words.
She walked in silence by her husband, and upon coming to the ship's side, could only sink upon his breast as he clasped her tenderly in a last embrace.
And then little Walt, whom Molly had taken from the nurse, stretched out his arms to his father, shook his baby hands and lisped out, "Pa-pa!

"There, dearest," cried Molly-joyfully, "you have heard him utter his first word before parting with him."

Edward Manson's age was three score and Mollie was his only heir, for Molly's cousin, Kate Barker, belonged to the maternal branch of the family, and there was no tie of consanguinity between her and Edward Manson.

Therefore was it safe to predict that Molly would be a right work has been been and Edward Manson.

Molly would be a rich woman, but ten, yes, twenty years might go by before her uncle's decease would put her in possession of this property. Hence the present condition of affairs, to say nothing of the future called upon John Allaire to bestir himself, and in the choice of employers none in his mind was entitled to precedence over Andrew Hollister, especially as the house had guaranted to Captain Allaire an interest in the ventures of the Dreadnaught. There was therefore good reason to assume—now that Allaire was enacting the double role of seaman and trader—that his labors would result in amassing a competence while he was waiting for the last will and testament of Edward Manson to be-Molly would be a rich woman, but ten. testament of Edward Manson to be-

One word concerning this most American of Americans. He was a brother of Molly's father, Thomas Manson, and consequently the own uncle of the young girl who had married John Allare. It was Molly's father—Edward's senior by five or six years—who had, so to express it, raised him, for their parents had died young, and M nson the younger had always sought both by means of affection and gratitude, to repay this debt. The solemnization of the marriage had taken place a few months after his death, and the young couple had begun life with no other invested funds than the slender fortune left by the elder Manson. Somewhat later a letter from her uncle had reached San Diego, ad-dressed to Molly Allaire. It was the first he had ever written to his niece and was destined to be the last. This communication, which will be found to be as concise in construction

Uncle Edward would be ready to set-tle up his earthly accounts.

Such was the condition of things in the Allaire family at the time the Dreadnaught set sail for the far west-ern Pacific, and the reader now being in a position to get a clear understand-ing of the facts of this history, as they shall gradually come to light, it would ing of the facts of this history, as they shall gradually come to light, it would seem to be advisable to give a little more than passing glance at the only relatives of the Captain's wife at San Diego, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Barker.

It had only been a few years since Lew Barker, a native of one of the Eastern States, now a man of about 30, had taken up his residence at San Diego. This New Englander, with his hard features and cold, impassive physiognomy and strongly-built frame, belonged to that class of men who, while full of decision and action, are as silent as subinxes and quite as enigwhile full of decision and action, are as silent as sphinxes and quite as enigmatical. However, no damaging rumor had ever been current at San Diego concerning this taciturn man, whose marriage to Kate had made him the cousin of John Allaire, and it is therefore not at all surprising that John, not having any relatives himself, about here expended. John, not having any relatives himself, should have entrusted his wife and child to the Barkers. But, really, it was to Kate especially that he had commended his little family, knowing as he did of the genuine affection existing between the two women.

But John Allaire would have been very careful not to do what he did had he had a glummer of the true facts of he had a glimmer of the true facts of the case; had he suspected the deceit which lay hidden behind the impene-trable mask of Barker's impassiveness; had he known with what indifference this man looked upon the proprieties of life; how little respect he had for himself or the rights of others. Pos-sessed of a certain physical attractive-ness, the man had from the start ness, the man had from the start gained a strange ascendancy, amounting almost to a fascination, over Kate, whom he had married five years before in Boston, where she was living with her mother, who died a short time after this union, the consequences of which were destined to be so distressing. Kate's property would have been quite sufficient to support them both if Barker hadn't preferred the devious to the straight parths. But such was not to be the case. Having wasted a goodly portion of his ing wasted a goodly portion of his wise's fortune, Lew Barker, already in bad financial odor, resolved to leave the city of Boston. On the Pacific Slope, in an entirely new country, whither his dubious reputation would not be likely to follow him, he hoped to find chances which were now de-nied him in the East.

Kate, who now had an inkling of her as it is practical in tone, read as fol- husband's true character, made haste anxious to leave Boston, where invicurrent and she rejoiced also at the proposal of meeting her only living relative. Barker had now been a resident of San Diego for three years, and yet so skillful had he been in disguisng the crooked nature of his transac-tions that not a breath of suspicion had attached to him. Such were the cir-cumstances which brought about the reunion of the cousins at a time when Molly had not yet become Mrs. John

The closest intimacy sprang up between the young wife and the young girl, and although it would have seemed more natural for Kate to exercise an ascendency over Molly, yet it was the contrary that took place. Molly was resolute, Kate was weak, and the young girl soon became the strong prop of the married woman. Kate rejoiced greatly at the projected marriage of her cousin to the young Captain—a marriage which gave no promise of ever resembling her own, and her hidden sorrow.

As for Lew Barker, his position be came more and more complicated. A crisis was at hand. The last scrap of his wife's fortune which he had hastily collected upon leaving Boston, would soon be exhausted. This man, by nature a gambler, or rather a reckless speculator, was one of those who regarded chance as their only dependence, and who are always ready to "The fact is, Molly, I'm an old bear of an uncle; not one of those North American grizzlies which wear fur and claws, but a human bear that finds his pleasure in living quite outside the pale of what you call society.

"But don't let this worry you, Molly, the dictates of reason, could not observe the name and feet a little larger than common with her race, a carriage full of decision, but not lacking in grace, a strong face, and yet one radiant with a mind lines of heart, such was Mrs. John Allaire. She was one of those women who force you take a second look at them, and before her marriage Molly, as and justly been reputed as one of San Diego's beautiful daughters—a genuine compliment, masmuch as beauty is an orare thing in this part of the world. She was nothing of a trifer; on the contrary, rather deliberate, endowed with good sense and a bright minding very certainly bring to greater development. moral rectitude, straightforward ideas and a mind free from guile.

It is important here to note that neither John Allaire, Andrew Hollister nor anyone else had any suspicion of the true condition of Barker's matters. In industrial and commercial circles there was no inkling that this adventurer—and would to heaven he deserved no harsher name—was hastening to his ruin. And even when the crash should come, possibly they would be inclined to look upon him simply as an unlucky business man and not a man utterly devoid of moral sense to whom all methods are permissible, provided they lead to fortune. And John Allaire himself, although he had never been specially attracted by the many was at this moment not in the least inclined to distrust him, and therefore was it that during his absence he would count upon his wife's being the recipient of Lewis' and Kate's kind offices. Should the emergency arisa, should Molly stand in need of their outstretched hand, she would not call out to them in vain. Their house would be open to her and she would find a welcome there—not only the one due to a friend, but to a sister.

Besides, how could there possibly be due to a friend, but to a sister.

Besides, how could there possibly be any suspicion of Kate Barker's sincerity of affectiou? Her love for Molly was as great as it was unselfish, and far from striving to set bounds to it, Lew Barker had encouraged it, no doubt with some sinister notive some doubt with some sinister motive, some shadowy vision of future gain, which he hoped he might be able to draw from it. He was perfectly sure, too, that Kate would not say aught which should be left unsaid, that she would be discretion itself as regards his pres-ent condition, giving no sign or hint as to the disreputable schemes in which he had become involved, or as to the sea of difficulties in which he was now floundering. As to all this Kate would hold her tongue, not even a word of blame would escape her. The domination of her husband was absolute; no power of resistance was left to her, although she knew him to be a man utterly without conscience, destitute of moral sense, who would not hesitate to commit a criminal act. And now that this man stood before her in his true colors, how was nal act. And now that this man stood before her in his true colors, how was it possible for her to preserve the slightest regard for him? The fact is, and it should not be lost sight of, she was afraid of him; she was like a child in his hands, and even now, at a signal from him, had his safety demanded it, she would have followed him to any quarter of the globe. But after all, her self-respect would restrain her from confessing her sorrows even to her cousin Molly, who may possibly have, had a suspicion of them, but that's all.

The relations of John and Molly Allaire on the one side and of Lew and Kate Barker on the other, are now sharply enough outlined to render intelligible the facts which are about to be set forth in this narrative. To what degree these relations are going to be degree these relations are going to be changed by sudden and unexpected events of the near future, no one could have foreseen.

A New ree-The Moringa.

[George A. King in Garden and Forest.]

Your readers, perhaps, are not generally aware of the value of Moringa pterygosperma as an ornamental tree in the Southern States. It is the horse-radish tree of India, the fleshy roots when young being equal if not suderior to the roots of the common horse radish. Those in Mexico are highly prized and form a staple article of diet. From the seeds are prepared the "oil of benne" used by jewelers, and the seed pods are said, when young and tender, to be edible cooked. and the seed pods are said, when young and tender, to be edible cooked in soups. The tree is a very rapid grower. I have specimens that are only four years old from seed and which are well bushed out and form excellent shade trees fully thirty-five feet in height, with trunks, from six to eight inches in diameter, while some of my young trees, planted only a year ago are twenty feet high. The Moringa has graceful, ternately decompound leaves, and produce when only a year old, or sometimes even earlier, clusters of delicate flesh-colored flowers, resembling in size and shape those of the wisteria, with a fragrance not unlike that of sweet peas. The flowers are followed by long pods which contain the triangular winged feet in height, with trunks from six to which contain the triangular winged seeds. 1 am thuch surprised that this tree is so little known in the United States, especially in the South. It is very easily propagated either from seeds or by cuttings, and it thrives on any well-drained land of any quality.

ON THE SAGUENAY, June 13, 1891. -[Special correspondence of The Times.] The voyager up the Saguenay begins his exploring at the spot where one of the earliest French colonies was planted.

'At Tadaussac." says Parkman. "at the mouth of the Saguenay, under the shadow of savage and inaccessible rocks, feathered with pine firs and birch trees, were built a cluster of wooden huts and storehouses, and sixteen men were left to gather the expected harvest of furs.'

"And here they would have died of

"had they not been received into the pabins of the savages."

This first attempt at settlement, about the year 1602, was repeated later and often, before any firm establishment was made. Yet in 1617 Tadaussae was the most important trading post on the St. Lawrence, outranking Quebec and Montreal. In that year the first mass was said there, in a phapel built of branches, "while two soldiers kept the files off the priest" their covered buckboards for a spin among the heights or a gallop to St. Alexis or a gallop to St. Alexis a mile or so distant at the other corner of the bay. In Canadian cities the cabmen call their carriages wagons. But when you penetrate the away on any kind of wheeled verbols—the figure of the Virgin and the cross; but when you are in front of its own amed a file the sky with its uplift, and you are reminded how high the river flows matchless. There may be higher mountains, but there can be few nobler cliffs.

Above Trinity, on the opposite side of the river, in laps of the heights are neced farms and suggestions of vilsoldiers kept the flies off the priest good men and women who made life with green boughs. No flies sally out from Ta doussac to afflict the toucist now; but this may be because the steamer arrives at night, both going to and returning from the Saguenay. You must stop off and remain through daylight if you would see that summer resort which has grown over the old trading post. It is like approaching a huge condensed lump of night with a few beacons dotting its front: a constellation-the Voices come down from invisible hotels and make cheer on the high landing. Summer costumes move about there, and, though you get an impression that the resorters have to climb ladders up the hills, they are so merry at their clattering that it seems the most agreeable exer-

that it seems the most agreeable exercise in the world.

But by sunshine Tadoussac is not formidable. Here the St. Lawrence River is so many miles wide that two hours' staming are required to cross hours' steaming are required to cross it, and the heights are the beginning of that sublime cleft which seems to have opened betwixt mountain ridges to let out the Saguenay.
Swarming to Tadoussac come the hunter, the priest who loves to fish, the member of Parliament and his family, the Canadian and American tour st every variety. Many prefer this rug-ged spot to the smooth drives, the easy boating, and gipsy-like village of Meli-cite Indians, to say nothing of country cottages and hotels at Cacouna Bay, on the opposite side of the St. Law-rence.

Perhaps few of all these passers care to recall the fact that Champlain re-treated to Tadoussac after the starv-ing fort of Quebec was first taken by Kirke. But nearly every one will straggle into the old church, built in the seventeenth century, containing among its venerated objects an image of the child Jesus, presented by Louis

This mountain-locked gulf is by no means a river of islands like the St ence. It lies smooth, deep, sav dark, glassing heights whose dows creep out and creep out until they nearly cover the surface. Neither is it full of ports. There are no breaks and bays and covers for convenient landing until that huge square side-lake called Ha-Ha Bay is reached. Weil might the first explorers burs into a shouting laugh when they found this splendid opening among cliffs. It lets you out of the Saguenay into an entirely new northern world.

The Quebec steamer making the vov The Quebec steamer making the voyage of the Saguenay only stops at Ha-Ha Bay once, either ascending or descending the river. If your steamer puts you in there in the morning, it will not take you off in the afternoon when returning from Chicoutimi—the limit of navigation. Entering Ha-Ha Bay is leaving the Saguenay miles behind. It is a good experience to come up river in the night, lie suspended from earth in rogs until the sun winds from earth in togs until the sun winds them all up, and then discover and possess yourself of that paradise. The hills here slope down to a level beach, and grass grows in the seams of their rock-paved sides. A trout stream called Ha-Ha River makes descent over stones from the west. And as soon as you land the woodsy odor of blueberries meets you, not such blueberries as come to market, all bruised and bleeding their ireshness away, but the virgin fruit, each berry yet in its veil of mist. A huge complete globe! of mist, a huge complete globe. always had a contempt for blueberrie until I saw them at Ha-ha Bay. Picture the earliest explorers of this river pulling their boats up the beach without having to feel along the timbers of a long stemmer causeway. No Norman-roofed village of St. Alphouse climbs the slope before them, and the small blueberry canning-fac-tory of present date is not there to tory of present date is not there to send out fragrant steam to their noses. Neither does a wooden path, hoisted on supports like a flume, wind up the heights. They have, in fact, arrived a couple of centuries before the summer tourist, and nobody lounges down to the landing to tell them big trout stories, or to report how much game can be found back in the hills. They climb the granite hill-breasts, do these explorers; we will say it is about sunexplorers; we will say it is about sunset, and the bay behind them is a vision of rising mist and silver after-glow. In all their lives they never tasted such freshness in the air before. It is beaven only to breathe there. men are so strangely constituted air is no stay to their stomachs. air is no strangely constituted that air is no stey to their stomachs. They must have bread; brawn if they can get it, and fish or wild fowl where ever that is to be had. These explorers are very hungry; too hungry to wait for fish or game. Beside the foaming little river—and perhaps this is the reason they called it Ha-Ha also, for nothing makes a man so cheerful as his ready dinner, they see a camp of Montaignals Indians, just squatting around the kettle. No gong has to be tounded for these rayenous voyagers; and the Frenchmen who vantured first on this continent were always so well bred that they were received without question in the best Indian society.

A chief rises to meet them and make them free of the hotch-potch in the kettle; the voiceless dogs snuff around first on this continent were always so well bred that they were received without question in the best Indian society.

A chief rises to meet them and make them free of the hotch-potch in the kettle; the voiceless dogs snuff around their heels; pappooses regard them with stolid gaze. But best welcome of all, a bronze-red maid brings a birch-bark platter heaped with blueberries fresher than the first leaves of spring, sweeter than honey, whiler than deer flesh; in short, such aboriginal blueberries as can be found nowhere but at Ha-Ha Bay.

A couple of centuries have passed since that occasion, yet newcomers continue to seek this heavenly spot and the native hand continues to fill

A New York club is said to have five or six takes among the hills. Traces of it may be found in excellent coffees, imported by a member of the ciub. The Canadian habitant knows nothing about coffee. His beverage is tea, made almost strong enough to float him on snowshoes.

The sound of the sawmill is heard a St. Alexis, and your chariot winds in and out among blocks of piled boards. You begin to realize here that the Saguenay is a lumber highway, and it is realized more abundantly as the steamer carries you on the Chicoutimi. steamer carries you on the Chicoutimi. I Tugs meet you, towing great fleets of logs inclosed in a brom. Logs are the aristocrats of the wilderness. To see them bowing and rolling on the swells for the Saguenay, their rinds indifferent to its salty bite, is to be deeply impressed with the original dignity of trees. I do not see how men can live among them and in the odor of fresh sawed lumber, without growing into stalwart and wholesome manhood.

Sawdust, like tawny lines of a mane,

Sawdust, like tawny lines of a mane, or like long, tremulous strokes of a brush dipped in umber, streaks the river for miles, and lightens its smoke-pearl surface. Nearly all the habitants of the upper Saguenay are lum-bermen. Trees rise up the mountain stopes until tney stand like ranks of needles, so diminished by distance, so straight and distinct. The white birch that bride of a Canadian forest, or first communicant is a better name, for slim, and white, and veiled in shimmering leaves she shows herself

In processions—is more beautiful than you ever find her elsewhere. Steamers carry tourists no farther than Chicoutim; but here the hunter's outing really begins. Young English feliows rush on board, evidently sent out by those maritime provinces which furnish the cream of English Canada. They are in hunting dresses and leggins, brown and exuberently well, loaded with tackle and hunting traps, rolls of birch bark, and bags of un-known treasures. Wire line and gay known treasures. Wire line and gay flees are wound about their hats.

"I say," says the biggest and hand-somest one of them, fellowing the steward with some game in his hands, "have this dressed for my supper, will you? I want it well done, you know. I want it hung directly."

Chicoutimi is a lumber town like St. Alexis, but the rawest of new Canadian towns has at once a mellow old beauty derived from the invariable Norman pattern of the houses. Turn a Yankee loose in the wilderness and he builds himself at once as big and thin a dry goods box as he can rear. It is a hideous blemish on the landscape, and grows worse with age. But turn a Canadian loose in the same wilder-ness and he adds to it the quaint pic ture of a stone-based cottage with former windows, up-curved eaves, vas wide chimneys, perhaps a gallery, and at any rate some outdoor place where he can sit and smoke his pipe of sum mer evenings. The house is compact, and it is airy within. Its stairways ascend without inclosure. The win-siled. An iron door closes it, and Madeline's rake and paddle he near by. There is always this difference be-tween ourselves and this French Canadian whom I envy with perfect envy. His mere presence seeins to breathe out: "I have arrived. Why should I hurry and fret my-elf about things? My house was planued for me before a Norman came to this country, and it suits me like my skin. I have my strip of land, my wife and twenty-five children; Father Francis looks after my soul; I make the good pilgrimage to St. Anne's shr.ne every summer; I am happy. In short, I have arrived."

The Roman church has a stone cathedral at Chicoutimi, besides ether solid structures. A Canadian author tells of going on a long hunt into the backwoods, and coming out of shaggy forests upon a clearing, where a mas-sive church lifted its cross to the sun. You cannot doubt his experience. wilderness is too remote for substantial Catholic masonry.

The Saguenay may be called the Nova Scotla the Macs swarm as thickly as motes of dust. You are made to defer to Scotch ideas there as rigorously as you turn to the left in driving. On the other hand, the province of Quebec almost to the west shore of the Saguenay, is solidly French. The river marries these races; the French stock saving its language as it always does, for that is the prevailing tongue along the Saguenay. It is very queer along the Saguenay. It is very queer to find Jean Bati, MacTavish and Archibaid Pilote, Marie McElfresh and Georgine Mackenzie, gabbling French together in apparent ignorance of any such ancient vernacular as the Gaelic.

In Chicoutimi you wander down tering from the hills. Voiture-drivers, with their board vehicles, spin about ready to carry you to the falls. Chicoutimi is built on the true Canadian plan for a village; a single street following the windings of the river, beginning with the church and ending with the mills.

The Seguenay is a world of mists, as if ascending from some lower world. as if ascending from some lower world.

I have seen logs in many places, but never elsewhere such aliver mist as rolls upward from the Saguenay, in angel shapes, in vast temple pillars and curtains, in steamers across mountain freuts. If there were such a thing as spirit dust, what could we call the Saguenay mist but fantastic essence of departed Indian? It writhes over the departed indian I will describe with such con-tempt of the white man's haste. It is always lurking ready to encompass him, and no war whoop is more chilling than its silent breath after midnight. than its silent breath atter in, you pass

The abrupt and jagged walls rise and rise until the steamer moves like a mere fish along the foot of Cape Trinity, a cross Trinity Bay to the opposite long promontory of Eternity. A mountain stuns most with its vastness when it presents a cliff side: The eye cannot then belittle it, moving from terrace to terrace. which makes the tourist regret that he has ever been exposed to the fever of progress. I know well the simple routine of that existence. There is labor without care or haste. There are neighborly visits, saint day celebrations, old customs religiously kept, loving respect to eiders and superiors, courtship and marriage natural and beautiful as the story of Franchon. Where sandy Scotch hair gets the better of soft dark French eyes there will be a little starp bargaining, but not much. The habitant is closedisted according to American standards, but he has little and lives on a primitive basis and it is part of his religion to basis and it is part of his religion to save what he inherits. Old chansons will be heard of mornings or of nights on the misty river, and the human heart is for ever sending up its contented and thankful prayer with the silver inceuse of the Saguenay. What a life it is, and what a pty we are all spoiled for it! Bread and milk, berries and content of the same and service of the same and grain foods, endiess quantities of fish and game, wild herbage from the woods,—the children of the Saguenay are well nourished. Where they have no churches the missionary priests brings them the altar. The habitant there must feel a contempt for tourists. He will tell you seriously that people are never ill at Ha-Ha Bay. They only die of old age. "Summer lingers, tangled among the hills, long after St.

Lawrence resorts are forsaken. The Saguenay has become a highway of tourists, who come and go briefly; for how few of them care anything about the people of those remote settlements. Rafts of logs float down. Steamers bring the world and take traway again three times a week until the season closes. Then winter shuts up that primitive land to its own re-day? When we have them let us never mention the word enterprise on Cana-dian ground. It is such a blessing to have a race of restful people near at hand, among whom we can sometimes plunge to cool the fever of progress.

Hallstorms and Forests. Swiss Geographical Society at Geneva Swiss Geographical Society at Geneva by Herr Runker, the chief forester of Aargau Cauton. He maintains that hallstorms do not occur where there are forests, and cites the case of a small chain of mountains in the south of Aargau, known as the "Lindenberge," which in their normal state, are completely covered with trees. About twenty-five years ago the forest was felled in two places, leaving wide gaps across the valleys and over the range and immediately afterward the valleys were visited by devastating hailstorms. Five or six years later the larger of the two gaps was planted with firs, and since that time not a single hailstorm has been reported in that portion of the range, or in the valley below, while farther up, in the neighborhood of the other gap in the forest, they still occur every year. The government is now considering the gap and by Herr Riniker, the chief forester government is now considering the advisability of closing the gap and letting "nature take its course."

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, June 1 .- [Spe cial correspondence of THE TIMES. Few cities can boast of a more delightful climate, finer situation, or grander scenery than this. Though barely eighteen hundred feet above the sea, it is far enough from the equator to escape excessive heat, yet not so distant as to be subject to extreme cold. Set in the midst of a great, green valley, the mighty Andes that stretch away to the horizon on every side, enclose it as within walls from eight thousand to twenty thousand feet high their snowy bulwarks in dazzling contrast to the cloudless bine above, the "living green" below, and the golden sunshine that envelops all as with a garment. From every street and balcony the most glorious views may be obtained of mountains tower ing above mountains, with such rosy tints upon them at sunrise, and evening shades of amethyst darkening to purple, as no brush can paint or pen residences of Europe or the United States.

The true name of the ancient capital, by the way, is Santiago del Nuevo Estremo—"Saint James of the New Beginning"—a strange title, bestowed upon it by the conquerer, Valdivia, something more than three hundred and fifty years age, in conformity with the jurisdiction that had already been set up at Cuzco, under Father Valveado, the first bishop of South America. The history of its founding reads like a romance—how Pizarro's whilom friend, Diego de Almagro, tried hard to conquer the tribes in this valley, but failed disastrously; of heroic endurance and deeds of valor on both sides; of the direct interposition of the Virgin Mary, who appeared standing in the clouds, to the confusion of the savages, and of the blessed spook, Saint James, the Spauish patron, who seems to have had a habit of riding downward from the skies on a milk-whife atset at critical income. of riding downward from the skies on a milk-white steed at critical junc-tures; and of the later vicissitudes of Pedro de Valdivia, who came soon after Almagro's defeat, with only a few of his countrymen, but a great following of friendly Paruvians, and established the town on the right bank of the Mapoche, in front of Araucanian village.

She had one of those sweet, angelic faces, with great, prayerful gray eyes, and no one would think that there was months, when northern people are suffering most with heat. Mr. Sprangler writes as follows about Mr. Sprangler writes as follows about Santiago's summer: "The first day of your arrival here, when you are filling and tacking and beating up the breeze, and blowing it as if it were a friend, and blinking at the dust that waltzes at you around corners and bears down upon you with the gait that Byron's Assyrian came, you wink at it all in the light of a practical joke and vow that you will go home tomorrow. And when you are searching from ohin to slipper for that prince of jumpers, beside which Cortez' bosom friend, Alvarado, was no leaper worth meationvarado, was no leaper worth meation ing, and taking yourself all in pieces but never catching anything, you de clare that yen will leave tonight. Bu weeks glide by, and the breezes blow and the pulpas leap, (how much better the Spanish name sounds than our vul-gar word fl.al)—and still you tarry, at first resigned, then enchanted; and the charm deepens and deepens as time

There is downright discomfort here during the cold days of the rainy season. The people have a deep-seated notion that fires indoors breed diseases of every sort, and except in house, built by English or American resi built by English or American residents, there is hardly a stove, grate or fire-place to be found in all Cnile. The enormously thick walls retain no end of dampness, the floors—leid flat upon the ground, without cellars beneath—are cold and cammy as tombstones, and as every casa is built around a central patic into which, all the rooms open, there are seldom communicating doors between the various apartments; so that, whatever the weather, one so that, whatever the weather, one must step out into the uncovered courtyard to go from parior to dining-room, bedroom or kitchen. Although the prevailing diseases are pneumonia, throat and lung troubles, and the mortality from these causes is frightful during wet seasons, nothing can convince a Chilean that artificial heat will not absolutely poison the atmosphere. When he visits the home of a foreigner and finds the rooms comfortably warm and dry, he invariably grumbles and requests that the door be left open so that he may not suffocate—but spreads his hands and coat-tails before the cheerful blaze as if he thoroughly enjoyed it.

It looks odd, at a party, to see ladles in bare arms and décoletté beddices, though surrounded by every luxury (except fire) that wealth can buy, These foot-warmers are unique insti-tutions, and as ornamental as indispensable. They are regular pockets, each just large enough to slip a pair of feet into, and are made of fur or flannel, lined with llama wool. They are often richly embroidered, and are of home manufacture, or made by the nuns or orphans in the asylums, who nuns or orphans in the asylums, who are all expects in needle-work. And oddest of all it seems, to see gentlemen and ladies perambulating the plazas in mid-winter,—the former with mufflers, overcoats and fur caps, the latter bare-headed, with no other wrap than a silken shawl. The manta is universally worn in church by all classes of Chilean women, but for riding, shopping and the promenade, all but the ultra-fashionable still go about with heads uncovered. bout with heads uncovered.

Santiago is especially blessed with pascos, or public walks. Besides the incomparable Alameda already described, the central plaza with its environing arcades and portales, and beautiful Santa Lucia—there is the Tajamar, lying along the banks of the Mapoche, which used to be the favorite resort before the Alameda was com pleted. It is an embankment of solid masonry, some three miles long, which was erected many years ago by a Spanish governor, to protect the city from the annual rise of the river, which sometimes swept away streets full of houses. A delightful winter prome-nade is the Tajamar—doubly attrac-tive because out of fashion and therefore comparatively deserted—its an-cient wall overgrown with vines and lichens, partially shaded by straggling willows and eucalyptus trees. Then there is the still popular Canadelia—a broad tree-lined avenue where spooning lovers loiter. The Alameda de Yungay; the Campo Marte, where is the penetentiary and an extensive military park; the spiendid Quinta Normal de Agricultura, Santiago's pride and glory; and Couisino Park—one hundred acres of lawn and woodland, with a fine, large race-course adjoinwith a fine, large race-course adjoining, which was presented to the city a few years ago by that wealthy and much written about widow, Senora Cousino. This is emphatically the rec-reation ground of the common people, where they congregate to dance the cuaca, drink chicua and celebrate their annual festival of Diez y ocho chico.

Though many citles have ex ensive and beautiful botanical and zeö ogical gardens, there are few which can show anything like this of Santiago—and I doubt if its equal, in area and the value and variety of its buildings, can be found anywhere in the world. It contains not only a vast botanical garden, laid out on a grand scale, with little lakes crossed by rustic bridges, a wilderness of blossoming plants, vines and shrubs, towering oaks and pines, statuary, shaded nooks, well-kept walks and plenty of rustic benches, and the greenest of sward without a single placard (so frequently met with at home) saying "Keep off the grass," and an extensive zoo ogical park, con taining all the animals of South Amer ica, and many others, conveniently ar ranged for observation in long ave nues, but a magnificent museum—an under-ground, grotto-like structure, containing innumerable glass tanks full of fish swimming in water supplied by hidden fountains; an agricul tural college, with a handsome mu-seum of its own and a long line of buildings devoted to its various offices; building solved to various officers, an enormous new normal school, capable of holding 2000 pupils, besides the teachers and their families, who, supported by the government, are all to be housed and fed under the same roof; and a variety of other edifices too nu-merous to mention.

One of the most unique structures in the Quinta is one contributed by Se-fiora Cousino—half castle, half pagoda—built entirely of glass bottles, bits of iron ore and square chunks of coal, cu-pols, balconies and all, representing the family enterprises—the coal mines, iron foundries and bottle factories at Zoto, the wine manufactured on their various estates, and the celebrated "Cousino beer." Besides music stands and dancing pavilions, there is a luncheon pavilion, with open sides and awning-shaded portioses, where par-ties may be served at little tables with ices, wines, fruits and other light re-freshment. There is also a big restau-rant, which is justly famous for its breakfasts and dinners—the former served between 10 a.m. and 2 o'clock, and the latter from 5 p.m. as late as a possible customer remains. Breakfast is naturally the most popular meal, since a whole day is hardly time enough to see all of the sights of the customary to come out early, stray about the gardens during the cool of the morning take a mid-day breakfast in the big restaurant. about (previously ordered in one of the numerous private parlors, and served in many elaborate courses if the party is very swell,) and then devote what remains of the afternoon to the mu-seum. Though the cooks are French, Chilean styles prevail in the food and its serving. Among other delicacles they give you camarones, or fresh-water crabs, shrimps with long, black hairs on, the plumpest of white-breasted patridges, they brown birds on toast, "sea-archina" steamed in their own round, prickley shells, strange fruits and salads-and if you don't take at least claret and champagne with such a conglomeration of unaccustomed viands, even the ser-vants will turn up their noses at you as "a greenhorn from away back."

Chile's national museum is housed in the imposing building in which the International Exhibition of 1875 was held—a miniature copy, in stone and glass, of the Crystal Palace in London, with a magnificent entrance, long cen-tral hall, and a wide stairway in the rear, branching out both ways, to rooms above. Space will not permit any de-tailed description of the wonders col-lected here, where the naturalist, the scientist, and the archaologist may revel for days without time to examine them all. The best of it, however, was stolen from Peru during the recent war, for Chile is not rich in aboriginal relics, like the land of the Incas. On this subject Mr. W. E. Curtiss writes, no doubt with truth: "Everywhere in Santlago and other Chilean cities, are no doubt with truth: "Everywhere in Suntago and other Chilean cities, are at a suntago, and other Chilean cities, are at a suntago, and alkaned as the prevail and and alkaned as suntago, and alkaned as, and almost everything in that beautifies the streets. Transports that were sent up to Callao with troops, brought back cargoes of planos, or household decoration, stolen from the cheerful blazes and articles of household decoration, stolen from the cheerful blazes and from the cheerful blazes and from the cheerful blazes, even marble images from the church steeples, with blue noses and chattering teeth, with the most of the suntago graceful manner, of which Chileans now begin to feel somewhat ashamed and make excuses for by terming it "the fortunes of war."

The collection of birds is the finest I ever saw, from tiniest humming-birds hardly an inch long to the giant albatross and huge Andean condors, golden pheasants, fan-tailed lyre birds, ichetrias, hooded birds of paradise—millions of them, and a whole large room devoted to their nests and eggs. Besides all those things usually found in museums, there is a magnificent array of aboriginal pottery; utensils and weapons of stone, bone and wood from all parts of South America and the least-known islands of the Pacific; wax figures representing all strange peoples figures representing all strange peoples dressed in their different costumes dressed in their different costumes, each in a glass case by itself, like Mrs. Partington's crocodile, "large as life and twice as natural," surrounded by its own peculiar implements and belongings.

Perhaps the object which attracts most attention is one of those horrible "pressed heads," the work of the Jivero Indians of Ecudor—the flesh or a human head from which the arri has been removed, shrunken to the size of a fist, yet the features preserved size of a fist, yet the features preserved with life-like expression, eye-brows intact, lips sewn together, gaudy feathers pendant from the ears, and long, black hair concealing the pike upon which this ghastly trophy of savage warfare is impaled.

And then the mummies! There are anough of these dried and nickled folk enough of these dried and pickled folk to populate a village—those that hailed from Egypt stretched out at ease in their gaily-painted coffins, leering at the ancient Peruvians, who are all bound up in the most un for table posture, with knees and ears close together. If only they could speak—what tales might they tell, of semi-barbaric nations that swarmed these coasts a thousand years before Europeans ever dreamed of an Americal They would speak of idols worshiped in great temples, of people who toiled, and hoped, and loved, and died, as men do now; of victory and defeat, adventure and conquest; of the slow up-building of a mighty empire—its gradual decline and sudden fall, and maybe a mummy from the Nile region might conlide to his Peruvian neighbor the secret of the different process by which he was preserved. emi-barbaric nations that swarmed process by which he was preserved, thus enlightening the world on a lost art—lost for all time, let us hope, for who wants to figure in such uncanny guise for the idle and curious of other generations to stare at? generations to stare at?

In Diego's curious book called "The Kingdom of Chile," it is gravely recorded that when Valdivia's forces met the Indians near the present city of Imperial, they were suddenly overspread by a great red cloud of wonderful brightness, and while the astoniand armies grazed in away upon it and ished armies gazed in awe upon it an angel appeared and rolled back the crimson curtain, revealing the Queen of Heaven in gorgeous attre, with an Indian kneeling before her pleading for mercy. The simple aborigines fled in dismay, and thus the battle was won by the Spaniards without bloodshed. An old painting of this remarkable scene hangs in the museum, and if not the same kneeling Indian, there are scores precisely like him. are scores precisely like him, all in a half-kneeling, half-squatting position — their knees ou a level with their ears — bound round and round with raw-hide ropes, mouths open, eyes gone, grave-clothes old and tanned like their own skins. There is a boy-mummy, still grasping a sling in his shrivelled hand; a baby mummy, which was probably loved by its mummy mother a few centuries ago and a grand mother mummy, clinging to her spindles and primitive weaving apparatus. Most of the horrible company have contorted necks and twister limbs, and every brown face wears an expression of fearful agony, as if striv-ing to convince beholders that the statement of history is true to the effect that mummifying process was begun by their relatives before life had left the body—it having been necessary begun by their relatives before life had left the body—it having been necessary to bind them fast in what was consided the proper position before death had stiffened their muscles.

IRRIGATION PROBLEMS. Where Water Must be Made to Run Up Hill. |San Francisco Chronicle.|

the valley. The center of the valley is naturally its lowest part, and the water must be carried through or across the depression and up the ascent on the west side to make it reach the lands which need it most, and this is one of the problems of irrigation.

To make water run up hill presents no difficulty to engineers, provided they can have all the money they need for the construction of the necessary works. An iron or steel pipe will carry water over the top of a hill just as well as on a level if the atmospheric prossure be adjusted properly and sci-entifically; but whether an irrigation district can stand the expense of such works, is the real problem. High works, is the real problem. High aqueducts can be built clear across the San Joaquin Valley at any elevation that may be desired, but building aqueducts is very expensive, so the problem of cost still remains.

Irrigation, however, is not to be stopped or even deterred by engineering difficulties. Modern science has a vest fund of resources on which to ing difficulties. Modern science has a vast fund of resources on which to draw, and the history and experience of ages to study. Given the water, the land, and a prospect offair returns upon the investment, and the way will be found to bring the water to the land, and the money which the union will cost will not be lacking.

We are just now in the renaissance period of irrigation in California. We have outgrown the accquia and the zanja, which the early Spanish and Mexican settlers used to advantage.

Mexican settlers used to advantage, and are looking sround for some sys-tem which shall be more extensive and efficient. We shall certainly flud it, for the necessities of the State demand it

The chief French surgeons and medical professors have for some time been carefully studying the effects of mesmerism on the female patients of the Salpetriére Hospital, and M. Bablachi a clinical surgeon of that estabinski, a clinical surgeon of that estab-lishment, has effected a series of expe-riments which would seem to open up a new future for medical science. In a new future for medical science. In proving that certain hysterical symptoms could be transferred by aid of the magnet from one patient to another, he took two subjects, one a dumb woman afflicted with hysteria, and the other a female who was in a state of hypnotic trance. A screen was placed between the two and the hysterical woman put under the influence of a strong magnet. After a few moments she was able to speak, while the one in the hypnotic trance was rendered as dumb as the hysterical woman had been. Luckily for the healthier patients, these transformations were only temporary.

Would have said: "that's a scab concern, keep clear of it," and then dispute the paper of the wond than the paper day in the high would have said: "that's a scab concern, keep clear of it," and then dispute the paper day in the high way.

The refuse stock from the cabbage field, outside leaves, staks and loose heads also, are valuable food for mitch cows, and if fed at the rate of fifty or prising results in increasing the milk supply. If fed just after milking or tase in the milk will result.—[Exchange.]

I was amused at the innocent boastfulness of a little tot whom I met the other day. She had been out playing with a friend of hers, a wide awake little miss just two years his senior, but finally she came in with a thoughtful air and said to her mother: "Mamma isn't it a sin to play with dollies on Sunday?"

"Yes, my dear," replied the mother looking with fond pride on the bright, upturned face.

"Well, I telled Minnie Smith so, and she said it isn't, and Minnie is a big girl 7 years old, an' I'm only 5, yet know more 'bout sin than she does." The mother glanced at me with a smile as the little one ran out again to join her friend Minnie.

If there is any douting Thomas in the community who does not believe in the value of advertising let him read the following earnest prayer recently offered by a sincere little child who offered by a sincere little child who was reaching out with her whole heart for a better life.

She was kneeling at her mother's knee and she lisped with much ear-

"Lord make me pure, absolutely pure, like baking powder."

I heard some one say the other day I heard some one say the other day that he did not believe that there was such a thing as a real Curistian Chinaman. "Christianity is a thing of policy with them," said he. "They have learned that a good many people prefer to employ the so-called Christian Chinamen, rather than those of the standard heathen type, and a Chinaman isn't anything if he is not politic. Send them back to China, and they would forget mighty quick all the fol-de-rol they have learned in the mission schools in have learned in the mission schools is this country," said this sceptical speaker.

But the Saunterer does not believe But the Saunterer does not believe this is so. A returned missionary was telling me not long since about hearing a group of Chinamen discussing the various religions of China. One of them said, "A Chinaman was down in a deep pir and wanted help to get out. Confucius came along and said: "If you had only kept my precepts you would not have fallen in." Buddha came to the mouth of the pit and said: came to the mouth of the pit and said:
'Ah, poor fellow! if you were only up where I am I would make it all right.'
'if,' said the Chinaman, 'I were shere you are I would not want your help.'
But then owne Jeaus Christ along with tears in his eyes, and jumped right into the pit and helped the poor man

Now who will say that that poor Chinaman had not grasped the mean-ing of this gospel of love, and did not perceive the vast difference between it and the teachings of Confucius and Budda? Experimental Christianity does not have doubts. It does not leave one blindly groping.

I have discovered recently that a little mouse has made its home in the portiere by my desk. He has just been Up Hill.

"Ab," he seemed to say in a smooth way, "I like to get the advantage of people when I can without their knowing it."

"So I perceive," I replied, "but the "So I perceive," I replied, "but the individual who indulges in such a propensity is always sure to over-reach himself sooner or later. And then another thing," I added, "there's not a woman who comes into this room that ou do not make shriek wildly at sight of you, and that of itself is sufficien to make your presence objectionable."
"Why, I'm hardly bigger than the tip of your two fingers," he seemed to say, "what harm can I do?" But I had no time to reason further with him, and, turning away for a moment, when I looked again I found that he had dropped into my paste and was eating with a vim that lost sight of all difficulties. Yet he kept both of all difficulties. Yet he kept both eyes fixed on me, and was ready for a spring at the slightest movement on my part. He was like a good many people in this world. He considered that paste-pot all right while he could control it, and his humor was excellent so long as he was not disturbed.

But pretty soon I saw another pair of bead-like eyes peering out of the folds of the portiere. "A whole nest o them there," I said, "but I'il take note of his movements."

there," I said, "but I'll take note of his movements."

Down dropped the newcomer on my desk. I sat motionless. On he came, scampering along in the direction of the paste-pot. One bound and he was up and looking over into it. But the mouse in the pot did not approye of him. He was not inclined to let him share his place with him. His mind was made up in a minute. He would boycott him. So as the new comer reached down to mind was made up in a minute. He would boycott him.
So as the new comer reached down to him a sharp tweak, which elicited a peered out from his hiding place several times, eyed the paste-pot longingly, with an air that put into words would have said: "that's a scab congern, keep clear of it," and then disappeared again into his hole, mourning that there was no way by which he bloomed and bourgeoned in big type all to no avail. Nobody has ever seen this mysterious plant in any other guise. It is a sort of agricultural Mrs.

Finding myself so cruelly snubbed by the editorial farmer, I feel a certain modesty about making further suggestions about the proper diet for mudhens, but if one is ever to take rank as an editorial farmer perseverance is the only hope. Therefore it occurred to me when I saw by the papers the other day that during a thunderstorm in El Dorado a shower of bumble-bees fell in such quantities as to cover the ground with a black mass of bees, that here was the opportunity of her life for the mudhen. A diet of bumble-bees might be very interesting for the consumer, and in tact a Piacerville man said they tasted like the whisky of the country sometimes described as Stockton slough-water, and that is just where the mudhens live.

To return to our grasshoppers, a very superior editorial farmer of the Exam-iner grain-fields is found giving this valuable advice:

In Fresno county the turkey cure was found to be most satisfactory. Unfortunately the stock of turkeys on hand were not large enough to be generally available, but those farmers who could command the services of facks of sufficient size saw the hoppers disappear with gratifying rapidity, and they had the additional satisfaction of feeling that they were living off the enemy. The turkeys preferred grasshoppers to mince pie. They began the campaign small and spare; they ended it fit for the Thanksgiving dinner of an Oakland councilman. As the turkey expanded from the small and spare; they ended it fit for the Thanksytving dinner of an Oakiand councilman. As the turkey expanded from the figure of Bernhardt to that of Crotzette the hopper disappeared, and as the devastating insects became transformed into white meat worth 20 cents a pound the rescued trees and vines, once more put at their green leaves in renewed anfidence.

Chickens can accomplish something against grasshoppers, especially in the early morning when the invaders are stiff, but they are unable to reach up high enough to pick them from the tops of vines and young trees. Turkeys seem especially created for this work. As they are a profitable crop of themselves, aside from their protective value, and as they can always be put to good service in varying the farmer's bill of fare, even when the market is slack, it would be good policy for the people of the San Josquin Valley to raise so many of them as to be always prepared for an emergency.

I may as well make the confossion here that it was in trying to steat this here that it was in trying to steal this man's idea that I came to grief. I was a little in doubt as to whether the muchens were tall enough to pick the grasshoppers off the tops of the trees, as he tells us the Fresno turkeys do, but I thought they might at least be able to harvest the lower branches. Then Prof. Gustav Eisen of Fresno informed an interested public that the grasshop-pers roosted in the tops of the alfalfa-trees and so I understood why they grew turkeys in Fresho as tall as Bern-hardt and as fat as Croizette.

Pursuing this unruly insect through the columns of my contemporaries I find in the Sacramento Bee this re-find in the Sacramento Bee this remarkable description of his habits:

But at all stages of its existence is the locust a greedy, voracious miniature monster. His appetite is developed with his birth, and when he emerges from the hole in the ground where his mater all ancestor's larve was deposited, when he is no larger than a mesquito, his deadly mandibles are in smooth working order and begin operations upon the first soft substance that comes in his way.

Nor is he dainty in his appetite, for, though preferring the tender foliage of veget tion, his taste is omnivorous, and clusters of them have often been found feeding on a dead snake or other animal food they may encounter. A partially masticated chew of tobabbo dropped amongst a cluster of them will soon disappear before their busy jaws, and they seem as partial to the nicotian weed as any of the human devotees.

More than all, he is a beastly little cannibal, and even among the choicest veretable dainties a number of them may often be seen feasting on the carcase of a feliow.

This tobacco-chewing cannibal must be own brother to the savage locusts of the Sahara, who were said not long ago to have devoured a French explorer who fell by the wayside. Then the editorial farmers of England wrote learned and solemn articles explaining the carnivorous nature of these flerce insects. When a little later the explorer turned up in Paris safe and sound and without a grasshopper bite on him, it might have been a little embarassing for anybody but an editorial farmer, but it did not annoy him at all. He would rather be wrong than Presi

The Bugs That Chew Tobacco—Fashion Notes for Fowls—Some Popular Queries and Answers.

The editorial farmer mourns and is sad. After twenty-five years cultivation of ramie he had succeeded in raising a State Superintendent, and now-comes the unfeeling law and nips that officer in the bud with a decision that the appropriation for his salary is unconstitutional. It is too bad. Here was the single crop our windy friend had succeeded in raising by the work of a quarter of a century, to be cut off in one hour by a man of the absurd name of Catlin, who had to be a judge of the Superior Court. From Siskiyou to San Diego, from the Sierra to the sen, the riotous ramie has bloomed and bourgeoned in big type all to no avail. Nobody has ever seen gry turkeys of the Bernhardt breed. Next thing we know we shall be told that there is no Prince of Wales and no Sir William Gordon Cumming.

Sheep of South America."

It has no horns or hump. Its hoofs are cloven, and it ruminates, or chews the cud. Its eyes are large and long, very black and prominent, with a most soft and gentle expression. When it walks it carries its ears forward, like a horse that is frightened, its neck is from two to two and a haif feet long, slightly curved and with a graceful movement, very much like that of a swan. Under its oreast, over the sternum, there is a hard, callous substance about six inches long and three inches wide, on which it sleeps or rests. When it wishes to lie down it doubles its feet under its body and fails on this callous substance with a sensible noise. When it is angry it spits an acrid matter, and can thus project it to a considerable distance; but it does not bite.

An Apparatus to Discover Comets. The sensitiveness of selenium to light has been taken advantage of by Prohas been taken advantage of by Pro-fessor Barnard, of Lick Observatory, Cal., who has employed it in making a device for automatically detecting comets. A prism is placed in front of the object glass of the telescope, and, as is well known, a prism will divide a ray of light into its primary colors—red, orange, yellow, etc. Back of the prism is a metal disphragm with slits, corre-sponding to the position of the three hydrocarbon bands which characterize sponding to the position of the three hydrocarbon bands which characterize the spectrum of comets only. tery and an alarm.

The most curious thing about the process is that the light of ordinary stars does not affect the apparatus, and that it is susceptible only to comets. The telescope is made to sweep the heavens by automatic machinery, and as the the face of the prism, the astronomers are not required to sit up all night to watch for the comets any more. Pro-fessor Barnard has the apparatus so arranged that it will ring the alarm in his bedroom. This invention is regarded as an extremely important one in the me-chanics of astronomy.—Boston Tran-

Two Frenchmen appeared at a linen factory in Jaroslav, in the Volga, four ago, and told the manufacturer that they were French government commissioners with an order for a cloth case in which to wrap the Eiffel tower in winter. They presented so many sealed documents and letters with the signadocuments and letters with the signatures of celebrated Frenchmen that the manufacturer swallowed their marvelous story and agreed to take the huge contract. The "commissioners" reful of salt and three heaping tenspooners and of Harsford's baking powder; mix quired from him $1,200 as an earnest of his intention to turn out the tower's new clothes, and left him with directions that he should go to Paris at once to communicate further with the city officials and to measure the tower. He went, with several assistants who were to help him determine the details of the undertaking, and thereby spent $800 more to learn that he had been swindled.

iar kind. Some weeks ago Mrs. Ellen O'Neil died intestate. At about the same time her new born child also died. The question to be decided was whether the mother or the child died first. If the mother died first the child would have inherited her estate, and at the child's doubt its father would be its heir. If death its father would be its heir. If, on the other hand, the child died first, one-half of the estate would go to the brothers and sisters of Mrs. O'Neil, and the other to her hasband. Judge Freeman gave his decision, which is that the mother died first. In accordance with this the estate goes to the father.—Hartford Courant

In the rare and delicious climate of California the days, all the year round, may be spent very largely out of doors. Even the housewife may have many hours on the broad verands, if there she has a corner for her work table and her books. Here the necessary patching and darning may be done, and baby be rocked to sleep, where fragrant breezes are blowing, and where the landscape stretches out like a picture before the eyes-a picture Some of the queries addressed to the editorial farmer are very mysterious to the lay reader, as, for instance:
"Will picking ducks during the laying season have any effect on the laying season have any effect on the laying?"

will picking ducks during the laying season have any effect on the laying?

Yet is he not cast down or weary by reason of this sad setback. The editorial farmer is accustomed to reverses, and nobody takes him seriously but himself. Just now he is busy with the grasshopper, salying his thousands and his ten of thousands—yea, verily, his millions. When the mudhens came out in millions the other day and ate the grainfields of San Joaquin as baid as a gaspipe, I suggested that this new variety of poultry might very well be put to eating the scurril, gossiping grasshoppers in order to increase the yield of eygs, but the editorial farmer took it unkindly—this trifling with a serious matter—and explained that mudhens laid no eggs. Why don't they keep some other breed then? I think myself that the speckled Pymouth Brother is an admirable hen, although for ornamental purposes not equal to the red-winced Hoodoo or the Ginger Cooktail that woos the blithesome morn with his melody.

Finding myself as which the broader light had hidden. It disclosed the outlines of many a purpling peak, and transformed with glory all the valley. The evening breezes blew very softly, just stirring the splendid green of the alfalfa at my feet, and, Oh, the charm of it! Out there came from the infinite somewhere, a most beautiful yellow-breasted bird, with gold upon its wings, and a splendor of color upon its head. It was not afraid of me. It hopped and twittered in the grass, and after a time a pair of doves came forth and cooed in the tree-top. Below was a stream, a silver mountain brook, full of rush and sparkle, and along the banks of the pretty rivulet a long, towering line of magnificent aiders grew. It was a picture that soothed me. All the unpleasant heat of the day was the unpleasant heat of the day was gone, and all the cares of the day,

I am sorry for those who have no eyes for the beauty and loveliness of nature and for those whose ears are deaf to all the melody of her many voices. I am sorry for the child whose mother is unable to interpret all this charm for him, and who never points out to her little ones the beauty of the flowers and the glory of the trees; who matter, and can thus project can be seasily as a sensible of stance; but it does not bite.

I wish mothers would study nature more and fall into more intimate companionship with her, for in this way they would find a thousand new avenues of pleasure for themselves and children. They would lose sight of many of the petty cares of life in the enjoyment of the larger things about them. It is only when we feed upon ourselves that we growdiscontented and unhappy. If we can get out from ourselves that we growdiscontented and unhappy. If we can get out from ourselves life expands, and joy flows in upon us from ten thousand sources. Getting out from ourselves kills mismisanthropy and warms our hearts toward others, and life becomes a delight.

which occurred last Friday evening. There is a certain air of mystery about the Greek characters themselves that adds a charm to their study, but it is the members of the Greek secret sothe members of the Greek secret societies alone who can fully appreciate the enjoyment derived from a knowledge of these mystic symbols. The members of the Sigma Chi Chapter were the last to give their annual Greek reception this term, but they are by no means the least. The boys, with the assistance of a few sympa-thetic Thetas, spent all of Friday afternoon decorating the rooms and halls of the music building at University Place, and in the evening threw open the doors to receive their invited guests. Cat-tails and silver bamboo were the principal plants used for decorations, and were gracefully grouped in bunches, arches, etc., in the halls. In the center of the main room was an imitation of a well, banked with ivy and a circle of tall cat-tails around it. In the midst of this was a large bucket of clear water with a number of silver fish. It was a novel and exceedingly pretty design.

gratulations were given to the four new members, Messrs, L. R. Garrett, D. L. Arnold, H. Shaw and R. T. Hail, who were the Sigma Chi pins for hour, 10 a. m. Mrs. Severence presiding. Dr. Lummis read a short article on "The New Italy," and Helen Mar Bennet, one on Sorosis.

Mrs. Enderlein read a letter from Dr. Maria B. Averill of San Diego on the Isabella Association. This was in regard to the appointment of two directors in Los Angeles, to plan the work for the northern part of the Sixth Congress District.

Mrs. Judson followed with a short paper entitled "A Dream of the Olive Spreiner." This paper was suggested by reading "Three Dreams in a Desert." It was a graphic and vivid picture of the burdens of woman, many of these being of her own making, others from the customs and usages of fash-popping ageints. from the customs and usages of fash-ionable society, some from the weak-ness and prejudice of a petty nature, and the heaviest lay in the bicterness and uncharitableness of woman against woman. Full of earness thought and admirably expressed, the paper went to the heart of every man present.

Mrs. Margaret Collins Graham of South Pasadena came next, with a paper on "Business Women." A sketch of the business woman of today and suggestions as to how and why she fails to stand on a level with her brother in the great struggle for finan-cial success. The paper was vigorous, witty, occasionally pathetic, and car-ried conviction in its close statement of facts.

Next week Charlotte Perkins Stetson will address the club, which will con-tinue to meet in Caledonia Hall during the summer.

DOCKWEILER-REEVE.

Invitations are out for the wedding of Isidore B. Dockweiler of this city and Miss Gertrude Reeve of San Francisco. The ceremony takes place at cisco. The ceremony takes place at 8:30 o'clock, Tuesday, June 30, at St. Mary's Church, San Francisco. Quite a number will ge up from this city, including the relatives of the groom. Father Meyer of this city will perform the ceremony, and Prof. Wilde will play the nuptial mass. Miss Reeve is well known in this city, where she formerly resided, her father, B. J. Reeve, having been in business in Los Angeles for some months.

they were most royally entertained by Miss Moil and Miss Mary Penmau, and met fifteen ar twenty of their friends. The house was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers, and the entire place lighted with numerous Japanese lanterns.

A musical and social evening was heartily enjoyed and a most refreshing lunch was served. It was with sincere regret that the lateness of the hour warned the company that they must away to their various homes. The away to their various homes. The chariot of hay was soon ready and the crowd returned to the city a little tired, but satisfied that the evening had been well spent.

Plowing Up to Fences.

Long-cultivated fields are apt to be usually plowed the same way, and this L ong-cultivated fields are apt to be usually plowed the same way, and this is, in most cases, by throwing a furrow against the fence, plowing around the field. If lands are made the result is that a furrow is thrown to the fence, or else a back furrow is ridged up a few feet from it. Thus the constant tendency is to enrich the outside of the field at the expense of the center. It is difficult to make changes in plowing while the field is in sod, but whenever it has been in head crops a year the plow should be used to turn together furrows where the field has been mainly dead furrowed, and it is comparatively easy at such times to constantly back-furrow from the center, leaving a furrow all around the lot next the fence. After two or three seasons of such plowing the former inequalities will be levelled up, and crops can be cultivated and harvested much more pleasantly therefor.

I expect that my boys and girls have often wished that they could prove to their own satisfaction that the earth turns round. Of course you all believe that it does because wise men say that it does. I found a little article in the Court Journal some days ago which I am sure you will like to read, and then you can try the interesting experiment which it suggests. Here is what it says:
"It has puzzled the heads of a good the many youngsters to know how the earth turns round. A German educa-tional journal, published in Frankfort, gives the following directions for proving that the earth 'does move.' Take a good-sized bowl, fill it nearly full of water and place it upon the floor of a room which is not exposed to shaking room which is not exposed to shaking or jarring from the street. Sprinkle over the surface of the water a coating of lycopodium powder—a white substance which is sometimes used for the purpose of the toilet, and which can be obtained at aimost any apothecary's. Then upon the surface of this coating make, with powdered chargost a straight block line search. charcoal, a straight black line, say an inch or two in length. Having made this little black mark with the charcoal powder on the surface of the contents of the bowl, lay down upon the floor, close to the bowl, a stick or some other straight object, so that it will be exactly parallel with the mark. If the line happens to be parallel with a crack in the floor, or with any stationary ob-ject in the room, this will serve as well.

"Leave the bowl undisturbed for a few hours and then observe the postion of the black mark with reference to the object that it was parallel with. It will be found to have moved about,

and to have moved about, and to have moved from east to west—that is to say, in the direction opposite to that of the movement of the earth on its axis. The earth in simply revolving has carned the water and everything else in the bowl around with it, but the powder on the surface has been left behind a little. The line will always be found. a little. The line will always be found to have moved from east to west, which is perfectly good proof that everything else has moved the other way.'

Boys generally are fond of adven-ture, and I never knew a boy who did not enjoy camping out. And I do not city, now of New York, are spending a few weeks on Boyle Heights as the guests of Mrs. McCloskey's mother, Mrs. Binford.

Prof. Ira More, of the Normal school, will camp out for three weeks during the summer vacation at his Cucamonga ranch. Ira More, Jr., gaduates from tain sheep. I have seen them stand-ing boldly out against the background ing boldly out against the background of sky when they looked almost as large as a good-sized caif.

I was reading sometime ago in St. Nicholas a story entitled "How a Little Boy Camped Out," and thinking you would like to read it too, I will have it printed for you in The Times. The story was as follows:

Once there was a little boy who all summer long had been very anxious to camp out over night. Behind his mother's house was a large garden—as mother's house was a large garden-as large as a whole city block—and at the with rocks cropping out. It was becamp, for from there the house would be out of sight, and it would be "just like truly camping." So his mother gave him a large old crumb-cloth for a tent, a pair of blankets and a sofa-cushion for a bed, a tin pail full of bread, cold meat, and hard-boiled eggs, and some gingerbread and apples for his breakfast; also a bottle of milk, a bread, cold meat, and hard-boiled eggs, and some gingerbread and apples for his breakfast; also a bottle of milk, a tin cup, a wooden plate and a smail package of pepper and salt. She then gave him some cotton to put in his ears—to keep out little bugs and things. She had the hired man help him drive the stakes and fasten the crumb-cloth over them. The hired man, of his own accord, brought from the barn a large bundle of hay to spread under the blankets, so as to make a comfortable bed. By twilight everything was ready, and Paul kissed his mother, his aunt and his big sister good-bye, and, shouldering his crossbow, marched, away to the "Rocky Mountains"—as he called the little knoll.

He pinned back the doors of his tent with big catch-pins and then sat down on the ground. Everything was dreadfully still; but the bright tin pail and the bottle of milk looked very comfortable in the soap-box cupboard; the brave cross-bow, with its pin-pointed and the bottle of milk looked very comfortable in the soap-box cupboard; the brave cross-box with its pin-pointed and the smallest baby-breeze was stirging; through a hole in the crumb cloth shone a star, and the star made outdoors seem stiller, yet. So she went upstairs, but before looking for the stocking she went into Paul's room. There in the starlight she saw the brown, curry head cuddled into its customary pillows. She was a good and faithful mamma, and so she did not laugh—out loud. She stooped over the half-hidden head and whispered: "Were you lonesome, dear?" and Paul whispered back: "Kind of lonesome—and I heard something swallowing —and I heard something swallowing very close to my head. And so I came in. And—you won't tell, will you mamma?"

until long afterward, when Paul had grown to be so old and so big that he went "truly camping" far away to the Rocky Mountains." And now we will close with this nice letter from a little friend whom I am glad to welcome into my family of Boys

Whittier is about thirteen miles from Los Angeles by wagon road, and eight-een miles by railroad. We have a very nice schoolhouse and school here. I am 10 years old, and am in the fifth

I have a very nice Shetland pony. I I have a very nice Shetland pony. I ride him a great deal. His name is Nip. You may think this a funny name for a pony, but one day as I was leading him he bit me on the elbow.

Last year we took The Times, but this year papa thought we would take the Express. We thought The Times a nice paper, so we began taking it again in May.

I must close now with kind regards. I remain your well-wisher.

I remain your well-wisher,

I remain your well-wisher,

I thank my little friend for her pleasent letter, and hope that she will write me again.

PERSONAL MENTION. Mrs. J. D. Cole left for a vacation of wo weeks at San Diego on Wednesday orning last. She will be at hom to her friends and pupils during July and August at the residence of R. W. Poindexter, East Adams street, and in the fall will remove her studio to the Y. M. C. A. building on Broadway. It is rumored that the Apollo Club mean to quite outdo themselves in the way of surprises, and that a certain famous singer will be their soloist at the coming concert, with Mr. Heine as

Mr. Bartlett is preparing to give a sacred concert soon, for which some good work is under way. Mass Mydia Moon left last Tuesday for San Francisco, where she will con-tinue her musical studies and will be an inmate of the home of Miss Jennie Vinston.

Prof. J. Sancho and J. Lombarders, two of the finest bandurria artists from San Francisco, are on the pro-gramme for the musicale at the Belleue Terrace next Wednesday evening. Miss Thursby inquired most cor-dially into the musical status and likings of Los Angeles, and when told of the existence and of the flourishing state of the Ellis, Treble Cleff, and Apollo clubs; of the number of good lectures, singers, and players, and of the class of music commonly presented here, said laughingly: "Why, I really believe you are more really musical than anywhere we have been considering the fact, that you are so far away from everything".

NORMAL SCHOOL The music for the Normal school exercises was under the charge of Mrs. M. A. Larabee, who secured Miss Molly Adelia Brown and Messrs. Beir-lich, McQuillan and Wachtel as assistants.

MUSICALE. The Day & Fisher music rooms were full last Monday evening at Miss Kim-ball's evening of music. The programme was an interesting one, and included songs by three of Miss Kimball's pupils, Z.ë. Lowe, Mabel Luitweiler and Nellie B. Manlove. Though each young singer showed a perceptible degree of nervousness, it was in no case so pronounced as to obscure the good effect of their training or the natural merit of the voice.

Miss Carrie Conger won a warm encore for her brilliant playing of a "Romanze" by Tscharkouska, and "The Cuase" by R. Limberger, as did also Mr. Beirlich on the cello.

Miss Kimball's only solo number was the "Jewel Song" from Faust, fol-lowed by a lullaby of Chadwick's as au encore. Miss Kimball's fine, strong voice is at home as well in dashing operatic music as in the heavy choral work of an oratorio, or in the songs of the lighter variety, and her singing is which will then astonish and delight always a great pleasure.

An elaborate musicale will be given at Belleyue Terrace on the evening of the Southern California Music Company. Among those assisting will be Mrs. Masac and Messrs. Aresalo, Barnes and Brenner.

S. M. CLUB. It was a pleasant and patriotic surprise to the members of the S. M. Club to find that such a varied and meritorious programme could be pre-sented, made up entirely of American

LAY SERMONS.

When this fleeting life is over, what then? How many ask the question. It is old as time everywhere, everywhere is this longing to penetrate the future, to take a look beyond the narrow house with its silence and stillness, its breathlessness, its moveless quiet. How the old heathen world longed so solve the mystery. How they multiplied their gods, and filled the stars and the hills, the valleys and the plains, the waters, aye, and the whole wide universe with them. But Faithful mamma didn't "tell"—not how helpless these gods were, how ntil long afterward, when Paul had feeble, how worthless. Oh, the mystery and the doubt and the de-spair which filled the hearts of those who trusted in them! No light anywhere, only shadow of doubt and the pain of despair. Mars was pitiless, and mighty Jove thundered, and Minerva kept locked within her breast the wisdom that she held. Nowhere a gleam of spiritual light; nowhere any certainty in regard to the future. Pan piped softly upon his reeds, but he breathed never a strain of life and immortality. Satyrs and fauns could dance about him, but never stirred the spirits of hope and faith at the sound of his melody. He was god only of the hills and pastures, herds and flocks and the happy bees. Vulcan was a god of terror. He ruled over burning mountains and fires, while over the fruit'ul vines, Bacchus, the god of revelry, held sway, and gentle Ceres over grains and fruits. But now where I or the heathen world, not even amid the splendid temples of Greece or amid anon, in adoration and praise to the infinite Being who created and sustains all, and whose glory is illustrated by all His works. And we can conceive that there may be stated periods, when, from every part of the universe, the anthem of praise comes rolling upward toward some central spot, where the divine presence is most felt. Oh, how gladly will each happy soul, animated by every new accession of knowledge, join in the swelling pæan as it mounts up to the third heavens! When there may be stated periods, when, from every part of the universe, the anthem of praise comes rolling upward toward some central spot, where the divine presence is most felt. Oh, how gladly will each happy soul, animated by every new accession of knowledge, join in the swelling pæan as it mounts up to the third heavens! When the mounts are them unite ever and anon, in adoration and praise to the infinite Being who created and sustains all. His works. And we can conceive that there may be stated periods, when, from every part of the universe, the anthem of praise comes rolling upward toward some central spot, where the divine presence is most felt. Oh, how gladly will each happy soul, animated by every new accession of knowledge, join in the swelling pæan as it mounts up to the third heavens! in regard to the future. Pan piped softly upon his reeds, but he breathed amid the splendid temples of Greece or the palaces of Rome, was there a God of immortality worshiped. Beyond the sweep of the Stygian flood all was darkness. The pale boatman bore his passengers across the silent waters, passengers across the silent waters, but never a word was there of the other shore. Well might men cry out, "If a man die shall he live again?" might they shudder and tremble upon the brink of dissolution, confronted as they were only by the shadow of death.

But not for us this doubt and uncertainty, for over all that future shines the light of eternal hope. Out of the silence of the grave comes a voice to us that is full of melodious sweetness "I am the Resurrection and the Life, he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." not this answer the question: "After this fleeting life is over, what then?

O weary doubter, O anxious inquirer, be satisfied, be glad with this assurance of the risen Christ, "I am the Resurrection and the Life, he that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he line. " Life, eternal life is what waits for Life, eternal life is what waits for us beyond the grave, a life of spiritual growth; of soul unfolding; of sinless blessedness; a life where we shall be all eye, all ear, where every faculty of our being shall be unfettered, and where we may drink forever at the fountain of eternal truth. Death brings no break into our life. The soul lives on without a pause in its activity. Its flight is swift from mortality to immortality, from a state of limitation to one of boundless being. The closing of the eyes, the hushing of the breath, and earth passes, and heaven breaks upon the Christian's sight. The fetters and the clogs of the flesh are all left behind. No more the hindrance which sickness brings: no more hours of silent slumber; no more hours of silent slumber; no more mistakes, or accidents; no more battling with adversity; no more yielding to temptation; no more pov-erty or want or woe; no more ignorance or shame, but in the language of heaven we may read the written volume of God's providence and creative power. The whole atmosphere that we breathe will be pulsating with life and love. The breath of Eden was not as sweet as will be the empyreal air of heaven. The rivers of knowlgood edge will flow for us, and we may gather the fruits of the tree of life in that land where righteousness shall forever dwell. What a glowing picture of future exfstence is that from the pen of the great Christian scientist, the late Edward Hitchcock, president of Amherst College, in his valuable work, "The Religion of Geology." He says:

the soul by direct intuition, but rather of those new channels that will be thrown open, through which a knowledge of other worlds and of other created beings can be conveyed to the soul almost illimitably. And just consider what a field that will be. At present we know nothing of the inhabitants of other worlds, and it is only by analogy that we make their existence probable. Nor, with our present senses, could we learn anything respecting them but by an actual visit to each world. the suggestions to which our reasonings have conducted us prove true,-let our sensorium be so modified and spiritualized that every thought, word and action in thos sations falling upon the organ of vision or by an electric current through the nerve of sensation, or by some transmitted chemical change, and on what vantage ground should we be placed! Without leaving the spot of our residence, supposing the universe constituted as it now is. we might study out the character and constitution of the countless inhabitants of at least 100, 000,000 of worlds, which we know to exist; nay, of 10,000 times that number which probably exist. Every movement of matter around us, however infinitesimal, would be freighted with new knowledge, from perhaps distant apheres. Every ray of light that met our gaze from the broad heavens above us would print an image upon our visual organs of events trans piring in distant worlds, while ever electrical flash might convey some ide to our mind never before thought of.
Every chemical ray, too, might inform us of scenes far off in the regions of night; and then who can calculate what organic and mental influences might be transmitted to us from being of all ranks and scattered through al worlds? To speak of organs, indeed as the medium of perceptions in another world, may be absurd, but we mean only, by that term, whatever may be substituted for our present organs; and we assume that the proporgans; and we assume that the properties of matter will exist forever; and therefore, we may presume that light and electricity, and chemical affinity, and corporal and mental influences will, under modified forms, be the modes by which knowledge shall ever be transmitted. At least, assuming be transmitted. At least, assuming that they will be, and the magnificent the anticipation is full of thrilling interest and the moral effect of dwelling eternity can never exhaust, and at tractive so immeasurably above all the knowledge of earth, that we al-most wait impatiently for the summons to break from our prison-house below, and to rise on our new pinions created things be enjoyed by celestial minds, and they can drink it in to the full measure of their faculties, the one inevitable effect must be to make them unite ever and anon.
